New Peace Plan
Around the Igloo
Wiseacres Will Rogers
Don't Blame Providence

—By Arthur Brisbane—

PAUL BONCOUR, French minister of war, has a new plan to keep Europe peaceable. He would have a "European army," with a "European general staff." This army and staff would become active whenever the peace of continental Europe might be threatened.

An interesting suggestion, but all would depend on who might be boss of the general staff of that "European army." The League of Nations, as Lloyd George has said, is "fading away" because it is simply the instrument of two big European powers, with other members of the league a mere chorus.

The real plan for Europe would be a "United States of Europe," such a union of states as we have here. But that will not come in another thousand years. Races, languages, religions and ancient feuds make it impossible.

St. John's, Newfoundland, reports that prosperity has come back to Northern Labrador. The Rev. B. Lenz, Moravian missionary, brings the news. Fish have been running heavily, also other necessary things, and every family is well supplied for the winter. Mr. Mason heads the news, "Prosperity Just Around the Igloo." They have igloos in Northern Labrador.

Will Rogers said yesterday in the Chicago American and various other Hearst newspapers: "This country is a thousand times bigger than any two men in it, or any two parties in it. These big politicians are in as serious about themselves and their parties.

"This country has gotten where it is in spite of politics, not by the aid of it. That we have carried as much political bunk as we have and survived shows we are a super-nation."

Timely words for Americans, "beat financial minds" included. All would worry less if they could realize that the 123,000,000 people of the United States actually have something to do with the prosperity, stability and growth of the United States.

Invested funds of the Christian and Congregational Churches, totalling thirty-three million dollars, have fallen only 15 per cent below book value, according to Mr. Boult, church treasurer.

The Christian and Congregational Churches are to be congratulated. Few financial institutions can make such a showing, and it is reasonable to suppose that Providence helped those that made the investments.

However, it is well for other religious organizations less fortunate to remember what Brigham Young said when he was selling stock in a gigantic boarding house at Salt Lake. He told the Mormon "Saints" that the boarding house and its stock MUST be a success, because it was built for the Lord. On the other hand, he said, "If it should fail, you must not blame the Lord, for that will be bad management."

Ten thousand dollars' worth of gold, almost pure, was taken from one small pocket. This interests everybody more than four years old. The human mind responds to the magic word "gold."

Youth wants it, to spend; old age wants it, to save. Uncle Sam thinks he needs it, to save him from perdition, and the greenback bogey man.

A really great gold discovery might bring prosperity around the corner, and in sight. It was the California gold rush of 1849 that did more than anything else to get rid of one depressed condition.

Steam drove away the depression after the Battle of Waterloo. Gold did it in the forties. Electric light and power did it in the latter part of the last century. Automobiles did it in the beginning of this century, after the depression of 1907.

Then the Great War, and the outpouring of billions upset everything. Something will bring back prosperity now, but nobody knows what it is. Possibly HARD WORK will do it.

A man arrested in the garden of Ramsay MacDonald, Britain's Labor Prime Minister, suspected of planning an attack on MacDonald's life. MacDonald would not have believed that this could happen when he was called to take charge of the British Empire as the representative of working men.

He has learned, as all will learn, that prosperity is not a matter of class government.

He has learned also that, while a man of humble origin, like Cromwell or Bradlaugh, may be the most powerful man in the House of Commons, the fact that a man comes from humble beginnings does not necessarily prove his superiority.

Hold Everett Man in Lindy Threat

An Everett man was arrested today on a charge of having sent a threatening letter to Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, mother-in-law of Charles A. Lindbergh. Considerable secrecy surrounded the arrest, which was made by postoffice inspectors, and there was a report the letter contained a threat to kidnap the new Lindbergh baby. This report was denied by Asst. U. S. Atty. Haven Parker. The man arrested is Charles C. Jodrey, 50, father of nine children. He was taken into custody at his home, 8 Rosdale ave., Everett. He is a carpenter. The letter was mailed to Mrs. Morrow at hr Englewood, N. J., home from somewhere in Greater Boston on Oct. 12 last. It demanded a large sum of money under threat of injury, of a nature not disclosed. Parker said Mrs. Morrow had received previous letters from the same writer, requesting money, and had refused to give it. Commissioner Jenney held him in $500 for hearing before a judge.

Driver A'so Injured When Belmont Car Hits a Pole in Fresh Pond Parkway

John E. Norton 38 a Federal prohibition agent, and his wife Kathryn, 36 are dying in Cambridge Hospital, the result of injuries suffered early today in Cambridge in a mystery crash being investigated by police and the motor vehicle registrar's office.

A third passenger in the car, John H. Ambrose, 38, of Farm rd, Belmont, where the Nortons also reside, was less seriously injured, but is also a patient at the hospital.

The prohibition agent and his wife, married less than a year ago, suffered fractured skulls, internal injuries and cuts and bruises when their car, operated by Norton, according to police, crashed into a pole at Larch rd. and Fresh Pond parkway just before dawn.

All three riders were unconscious when Patrolman John Benson of the Metropolitan police arrived in a cruiser early today.

The car, in which the three injured persons were returning from a party at Natick, the pole with such terrific force that the entire neighborhood was aroused. Neighbors rushing to the scene, found the three pinned beneath the machine which had overturned.

While men worked frantically to free the trio, fearing that the wreckage might burst into flames, police from North Cambridge, Harvard sq. and the Metropolitan district station, were summoned.

Police were unable to discover what caused the Norton car to leave the road, but it is believed that wet leaves caused the auto to skid.

SUIT FILED TO BALK AUTO RISK LAW

Clinton Man Charges Compulsory Insurance Infringes on His Constitutional Rights

The first legal battle against the Massachusetts compulsory automobile insurance law began in Federal court today when Joseph Poresky of Clinton demanded that Morgan T. Ryan, registrar of motor vehicles be ordered to grant him registration for his car without insurance.

Poresky is the first autoist in the State to claim that the compulsory insurance law violates his constitutional rights, and it is on these grounds that the basis of his fight.

"According to the constitution, I am entitled to make a living without interference," the petition recites. "The compulsory insurance law makes it difficult for me to make a living, and consequently, makes it harder for me to enjoy life.

"I am a licensed driver. I own a car, and I alone drive it. I have a vested right to use the highways. Both the first article of the constitution, and the 14th amendment are violated when the registrar refuses to grant me registration because I refuse to take out insurance."

Registrar Ryan was informed of Poresky's complaint, and will watch the proceedings carefully.

There are more than 700,000 autoists in the state who likewise will follow the case with interest.

More Bally-Hoover

HOPELESSLY defeated at the polls if the voters are actuated by a fair appraisal of his record, President Hoover, in a belated and high-pressured effort to re-sell himself to the people now seeks to create illusions.

By word paintings of economic romances and possibilities, the President, in his major New York address, sought to divert the minds of the people from present-day harsh realities.

The President's statement concerning agriculture readily lends itself to statistical testing.

"Employment, agriculture, business — all of these show the steady, if slow, healing of our enormous wound," Mr. Hoover said.

Doesn't the President realize that, in so far as agriculture is concerned, the price gains of the summer have been very largely lost since September?

Doesn't the Chief Executive know that corn and wheat prices have fallen recently to new low levels?

If the President looks for vindication on the ticker tape, he will find cause for discouragement.

ON the very day when he spoke at Madison Square Garden, the Department of Agriculture at Washington announced that the general level of farm prices dropped three points during the month ended October 15.

From 59 per cent of the pre-war average in mid-September, the index price of 27 agricultural commodities fell to 56 per cent on October 15. A year ago the index was at 68 per cent of pre-war.

The department ascribed the fall in the index to the fact that there had been reductions in the prices paid to farmers for all commodities except wool, eggs and dairy products. Fruits and vegetables, like grains, were reported as having fallen to the LOWEST LEVELS FOR THE TWENTY-TWO-YEAR PERIOD COVERED BY THE DEPARTMENT'S STATISTICS.

In the light of such data, how has the Republican candidate the temerity to indicate that agriculture is definitely recovering?

The broader assertion in the President's address that a Democratic victory would threaten the American system is of course in the realm of fancy, and is not susceptible to mathematical analysis.

NEVERTHELESS, the fatuity of the assertion is indicated by the comment in the current monthly letter of the non-partisan National City Bank of New York, one of the two largest American banks, which says: "Partisan feeling has been

Vermont's Only "Reasonably Safe" in Electoral Vote for Hoover; Mass. by 50,000

(Editor's Note: The author of this piece admits he is the only political analyst who correctly predicted the recent Democratic victory in Maine. He is thoroughly conversant with the inside workings and confidential information of both parties in New England. His prediction will without doubt cause a sensation.)

Roosevelt and Ely will carry Massachusetts. It may be a sweep.

Senator Walsh tells me it will be Roosevelt from 25,000 to 50,000. He is right. Possibly too modest in his estimate.

New Hampshire may go Democratic.

The only New England state that can be counted for Hoover with reasonable certainty is Vermont. Even that is not that.

Newspaper and magazine polls show Roosevelt will sweep the country. New England is not different. Hard times have not been local to any section. The same estimate of Hoover exists everywhere.

Take Maine as an example. There 43,000 voters shifted. One out of every five Republicans who went to the polls marked their ballots Democratic. New voters came out en masse to place their crosses opposite the name of every Democrat they could find on the ballot.

LEAPS OFF TOP EMPIRE BLDG.

New York, Nov. 3—An unidentified man about 30 years old committed suicide today by jumping from the top of the mooring mast on the 103d floor of the Empire State building. A photo in a pocket bore the name of Fred Eckhardt.

The man rode up in the elevator with Atty. Pierrepont L. Stackpole of 84 State st., Boston. The two were the only passengers, and Stackpole said the man was carrying a cigar box.

As the elevator operator opened the door to the glass enclosed observation tower on the 102nd floor the man darted out and vaulted an iron gate guarding a stairway to an open landing on the 103rd floor, built for the use of passengers disembarking from airships.

A guard ran after him, but was unable to catch him. Opening the door leading from the top of the mooring mast, the man walked out on the platform and leaped over a rail. It was the first suicide from the top of the building.

Pity Poor Policeman When Stern Duty Calls 2 Ways

There may be something said at roll-call of the Newton police tonight regarding the relative importances of a stolen dog and a prisoner occupying the "Black Maria."

It may also be that two officers (names deleted from the blotter), will be complimented for retrieving the dog or censured for losing the prisoner. It all depends on the point of view.

Lawrence G. Cannon, 25, of Newton Highlands, was en route to the lockup early today, having been removed from his home on the command of relatives who said he was drunk and noisy.

As the wagon sped on its way the two officers spied a little dog that answered the description of one that didn't go home las night.

Both officers quickly halted the little dog several blocks and finally made the capture. But when they returned to the wagon the prisoner had gone.

Several hours later they found him in a Boston hotel and quite sober.

"When you left me all alone I thought you lost interest in me," he said, "so I just left too."

He appealed a $10 fine in Newton district court.

Roosevelt Odds Now 3 1-2 to 1

New York, Nov. 3—With little or no Hoover money in sight, Roosevelt jumped again today to a 3½ to 1 favorite to win next Tuesday's election, according to odds quoted in Wall St. Until now the odds were 3 to 1.

W. L. Darnell & Co., 32 Broadway, announced the following betting figures:

Roosevelt 3½ to 1 to carry the nation and 2 to 1 to carry New York State. Lehman was favorite over Donovan for the governorship by 3½ to 1. Tuesday's figures quoted Lehman as 3 to 1 favorite. Odds of 5 to 1 were offered that Senator Wagner will be re-elected. Even money was offered that Hoover would not carry eight states.

Considerable Roosevelt money was said to be in sight with few takers.

GOV. ROOSEVELT IS CONFIDENT OF VICTORY BY LANDSLIDE

NOMINEE STARTS HIS FINAL DRIVE IN N. Y. AND JERSEY

By RAYMOND I. BORST,
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 3 (INS)—Rested after his strenuous invasion of New England, and supremely confident that next Tuesday will witness the greatest Democratic landslide in political history, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will go to New York today for the final drive of the presidential campaign.

The governor planned to leave the executive mansion shortly before noon, motor to Hyde Park and have lunch with his mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, then continue on to his New York home, arriving there about 6 p. m.

During the early part of the evening he will motor to Jersey City and Newark, where Frank Hague, Democratic boss of New Jersey, has told aim "tens of thousands" of Democrats and "former Republicans" will be waiting to greet him.

HAGUE DEMANDS SPEECH

Gov. Roosevelt said today he would not speak in either city, but that he would content himself with "waving my battered old hat." Mayor Hague has warned him, however, that the crowds in Newark and Jersey City will be so large he will not be able to get through unless he makes a brief speech from his car.

"I just couldn't resist going back to see my New Jersey friends once more before election," the governor explained.

This will mark the governor's second invasion of New Jersey. During the latter part of August he was greeted in Sea Girt by a crowd estimated at 100,000. It was on that occasion, and for the only time during the campaign, that he devoted his entire speech to a demand for speedy repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and repealing such action, modification of the Volstead law.

Returning to New York after his visit to Newark and Jersey City tonight the Governor will address a meeting of the Republicans-for-Roosevelt League in the Metropolitan Opera House.

Owen D. Young and other leading Democrats will speak from the same platform.

From the time he flew to Chicago to accept the nomination and throughout the campaign Gov. Roosevelt has reiterated that his fight is not with the rank and file of the Republican party, but rather with what he characterized as a "bankrupt Republican leadership."

Because he will be speaking to an audience composed of men and women who voted for President Hoover four years ago, but who have announced their intention of supporting the Democratic party this year, Governor Roosevelt will elaborate upon his charges that the present Republican leadership in Washington has failed to meet the economic crisis.

FINAL DRIVE WITH AL

Tomorrow night he will speak in Brooklyn and on Saturday night in Madison Square Garden in New York each time with former Governor Al Smith.

Roosevelt will bring his campaign to a close Monday night at Poughkeepsie, when he addresses the "home folks" of Dutchess County.

"For 20 years," he said, "regardless of whether I was a candidate for public office, I have talked to the home folks in Poughkeepsie on election eve."

Part of the governor's Monday night speech will be broadcast, and his final appeal to the voters in behalf of the Democratic national ticket will be made at that time. During the rest of his speech he will urge the election of the Democratic state ticket, headed by Col. Herbert H. Lehman.

On Tuesday afternoon, at his Hyde Park home, Gov. Roosevelt will be greeted by 200 motion-picture reels from all parts of the East. He will remain at his home Monday, catching up on some state business.

After voting at Hyde Park, on Tuesday, he will motor to New York and receive the election returns that night at Democratic national headquarters.

10 Times at Bat, But No Score

Here's a list of Believe-It-Or Nots for Ripley:

Mr. Hoover made ten speeches in one day and nobody scored.

Ogden Mills spoke three hours without mentioning the subject.

Washington dropped a bottle overboard in 1920. Twelve years later it came ashore on a plank.

The Farm Board bought an entire wheat crop and never made a biscuit.

Mr. Hoover lambasted Mr. Roosevelt on the air for two hours. Mr. Roosevelt followed right after and shellacked Mr. Hoover for another two hours, from 10 to midnight. The next speaker on the air was a tenor, who sang, "The Night Was Made For Love."

Somebody burned the Bonus Legion shacks in Washington, but nobody did it.

A man taking a railroad journey with his family was cheated by card sharks. His wife ran off with the handsome brakeman. The train ran off a trestle. He was badly hurt, and the baby swallowed the tickets. While on his way to the hospital the ambulance ran into a billboard, on which was the Republican campaign slogan, "It might have been worse."

HOOVER SCARE CONDEMNED BY SMITH

President's Madison Square Speech Killed His Last Possible Chance, Says Al

Troy, N. Y., Nov. 3—Alfred E. Smith pleaded here before a wildly enthusiastic audience of 2000 for the election of the Democratic state and national tickets.

The former governor flailed both President Hoover and Col. William J. Donovan, Republican candidate for governor, as national and state heads of the drys.

Linking Hoover and Donovan in the dry forces, Smith warned that if a Republican Legislature is elected and if repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is submitted to a convention of the people, "this state would go dry and would remain dry," despite the sentiment of millions of New York wets.

Regarding President Hoover's Madison Square Garden speech Monday night, Smith said the President was "talking to scare the people," and went on:

"I never had any doubt about the Democratic cause, and I never entertained for a moment a doubt about the success of the Democratic ticket, but if perchance some doubt did creep into my mind it was thoroughly dispelled when I listened to President Hoover at Madison Square Garden."

Referring to his recent campaign tour, he declared:

"I started through New England and I invaded New Jersey; I conquered Buffalo and I arrived in Troy to urge upon my listeners, both seen and unseen, with all the vigor that I can bring to my command, that they give their full and complete support to Roosevelt and Garner."

Taft's Belated 1912 Tour Recalled as President Starts for Pacific Coast

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Nov. 3 (INS)—President Hoover—bearing the hopes of the Republican party squarely on his shoulders—leaves Washington this afternoon for one final long-range cast of the political die that will determine whether next Tuesday's election brings him victory or defeat.

Fateful November 8 will find Mr. Hoover climaxing a last-minute transcontinental campaign tour at his old home in Palo Alto, Cal., casting his own vote for re-election. Between 4:20 this afternoon and noon of election day, he will have traversed virtually every section of the country that observers now call "doubtful."

TAFT'S TOUR RECALLED

Not since William Howard Taft, in 1912, belatedly stumped the hustings, has an incumbent made such a vigorous campaign for re-election as President Hoover is now conducting.

Before midnight tonight, the President will have once more carried his arguments against election of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt into West Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania through the medium of rear-platform appearances.

Tomorrow morning will find him campaigning through the hotly-contested Central States for the fifth time in a month. Gary, Ind., will be the setting for a 9 a. m. (C.S.T.) speech, and half a dozen stops will be made thereafter in Illinois to enable further personal contact with the electorate before reaching the State capital at Springfield at 4:30 p. m., when the first major address of this final drive is to be delivered.

IN WISCONSIN SATURDAY

A quick jump from Springfield will carry the presidential special across the Mississippi river for the second time this campaign to St. Louis. In the Missouri center, Mr. Hoover will make a second prepared speech Friday night.

Wisconsin, home of the La Follettes, will be stumped Saturday, and Saturday night will see the President in St. Paul, Minn., where his third big appeal for retention in office is to be offered.

From St. Paul, the Hoover train will hustle westward clear to California, with stops probable in such centers as Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City and Carson City. Palo Alto will be reached about noon Tuesday.

Roosevelts to Vote at Country Home

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 3 (AP)—Governor Roosevelt will cast his vote November 8 at Hyde Park, his country home, it was said at the executive mansion. The governor and Mrs. Roosevelt have always voted at the small village near Poughkeepsie and registered there again this year.

on the increase; and in the campaign speeches the history of the depression and the record of each party have been raked over in a manner sometimes disturbing, and tending to obscure the important fact that BOTH PARTIES HAVE TAKEN THE CONSERVATIVE SIDE OF THE MAJOR ISSUES."

Where does that leave the cry of destructive radicalism which President Hoover has undertaken to raise?

The City Bank, referring to the importance of public finance, adds: "There is no basis for prejudgment or anxiety. It is rather to be considered that the most notable aspect of this campaign is the indorsement by both candidates and party platforms of principles of economy and sound money. They are alike in recognizing the importance of balancing the budget, and there is no agitation of the money question among the leaders of chief influence within either party."

THUS, from a non-partisan standpoint, the City Bank sweeps away the illusions which have been lugged in to frighten the electorate.

It is not only safe for the country to choose Roosevelt, who has stuck to a high-minded discussion of the issues, but it appears that election of a Democratic administration would set in motion forces which would promote sound recovery in business, agriculture and employment.

F. D. SAFE MAN, SAYS YOUNG

New York, Nov. 3—"I have no thought that Mr. Roosevelt is the kind of a man who will be subject to 'influence' either of individuals or groups, conservative or radical. If I did, I would not support him for President."

That was the view given of the Democratic nominee for President by Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of General Electric Co., in a letter to Demarest Lloyd, executive secretary of the Taxpayers' Union at Washington, who had asked Young's advice on how to vote.

Copies of the correspondence and letters between himself and an employe of his company, and also to a stockholder, were made public by Young. To the employe and the stockholders he wrote:

"I do not think you should ask any officer of the General Electric Company how your should vote, or accept their advice if they were so unwise as to volunteer it, which I am thankful to say, they have never done.

"I hope you will vote as your intelligence and intuitions, which I value equally highly, dictate. The General Electric Co. can succeed only when, as and if the United States succeeds, so you will be serving your own and your company's interest best by thinking of your country first."

CURLEY LAUDS ROOSEVELT

Mayor Curley was loudly acclaimed by 2000 persons at Pottsville, Pa., in a speech at the State Armory there for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"The nation cannot exist with nearly half of the people on the borderland of starvation and a small number of the remaining half in possession of the vast wealth of the country and apparently unwilling to contribute either money or thought to the relief of those in need," Curley said.

"The election of Franklin D. Roosevelt means a return of government of and for and by the people, rather than as at present, government of the bankers, for the benefit of foreign governments."

"The time for a change in the control of the government of the nation is now, and the duty of the hour must be apparent to every American."

'DEPRESSION GOT ME,' SIGHS M'KNIGHT, HIGH LINE BANKRUPT

BANKER LISTS TWO MILLION LIABILITIES

Says He Believes Public Will Agree That Certain Officials Speeded His Downfall

Edwin T. McKnight, sometimes called the collapsing financier, said something today.

What he said was in self-justification of his personal petition in bankruptcy, listing liabilities of $2,101,523.75, which yesterday followed up the collapse of his Medford Trust Company.

"I am only one of millions who have been wiped out by the depression," he said.

He wished, fervently, that he were the only one.

"I wish to Heaven I was the only one," he said.

INVESTIGATION WELCOME

He welcomes an investigation, said he who has had so many investigations which have come to so little.

"I welcome," he said, "any investigation of my affairs by Mr. Bushnell or anyone else."

What is more, he believes the public will be satisfied.

"I believe," he said, "the public will be satisfied that the depression and the enmity of certain public officials caused the closing of the Medford Trust Co. which wiped out $1,000,000, the value of my stock in that bank."

His finances, he said, were in a deplorable state.

"The loss thus incurred," said McKnight, "plus assessments already levied, has caused the present deplorable condition of my finances."

That is all he said.

BUSHNELL SEEKS ASSETS

Robert T. Bushnell, counsel for the bank commissioner in legal attempts seeking to recover from McKnight some of the money lost by the customers of his bank, indicated he would oppose the bankruptcy plea and seek the present whereabouts of vast assets once credited to the Medford banker.

When the bankruptcy papers were filed shortly before closing time yesterday, they included an item of $1,000,000 with the notation "in dispute." It is believed to cover the suit now pending before a master in Suffolk court.

Atty. Bushnell, it was pointed out, may subject McKnight to rigid examination in regard to his assets because Bushnell automatically acts for depositors of the bank in his capacity as counsel for the bank commissioner.

McKnight listed assets that totaled $22,142.21. They included shares in the Medford bank, others in the closed Industrial Bank & Trust Co. the Revere Trust Co. an the Haverhill Trust Co.

No schedules were filed with the bankruptcy papers. The law allows 10 days in which to complete that task.

Atty. Bushnell said he was not surprised at what he termed to be "the move" of the banker.

RAID STILL ON WINSLOW'S ESTATE

Dry Agents Capture Injured Man in Flight From $40,000 Plant

Worcester, Nov. 3—One man is under guard at City Hospital while state police are seeking a second today after an elaborate distillery valued at $40,000, was uncovered last night by federal raiders in a barn on the Leicester estate of Col. Samuel E. Winslow, former congressman and famous Harvard athlete.

In Washington today, Col. Winslow, who is chairman of the U. S. Board of Arbitration, expressed surprise when informed of the raid and declared he rented the barn September 1 with the understanding it was to be used as a stable for horses. He said he received three months' rent in advance and had not been near the place since.

Federal raiders, under the direction of U. S. Prohibition Director John Hall, last night descended on the barn at Stonewall Farm the colonel's estate, and found two men operating the huge still.

FUGITIVE BREAKS LEG

When the dry agents burst in the two men fled from the rear of the stable and leaped over a stone wall. The raiders gave chase and when they reached the top of the five-foot wall they found one man had disappeared while the other was lying doubled up with one leg broken, on a stone pile on the other side of the wall.

He was placed under arrest and taken to City Hospital here. He gave his name as John Skok, 35, of this city. He was ordered held in bonds of $2500 until his condition permitted his appearance before the United States commissioner.

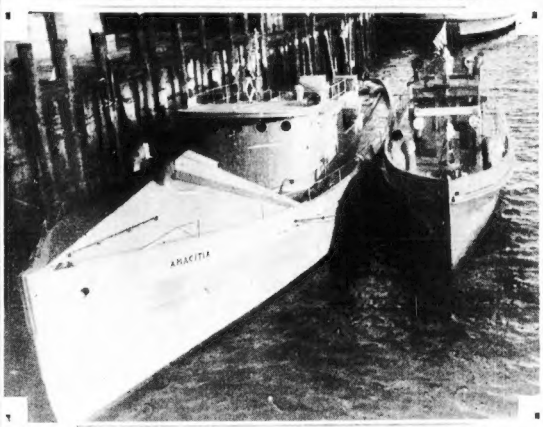
STATE POLICE NOTIFIED

Authorities were unable to secure any information from him regarding the identity of the other man. State police were notified and began an intensive search for him. At an early hour today their search was still unsuccessful.

Federal agents said the seized still was elaborately equipped and capable of producing a 2000-gallon output daily. It was valued at between $25,000 and $40,000.

Col. Winslow formerly represented Massachusetts in the 4th Congressional District. He was named to the Board of Arbitration in 1926 by President Coolidge and is still a member of that body.

RUM BOAT'S SPEED IS NO HELP NOW



Tied up at Appraisers' stores with a Coast Guard hornet at her side, the speedy lines and the powerful radio of the Amacitia are of no avail. Despite wireless equipment strong enough to pick up any Atlantic coastal station, the ship, of Barbados registry, together with a valuable cargo of liquor and cologne, fell into the hands of a federal patrol on Buzzards Bay yesterday. She was brought here, after the capture, by her British skipper who says he was forced inshore by the storm, and threatens an international gumpus.

SECRET RADIO STATION IS SOUGHT

Powerful Equipment on Captured Rum Ship Leads to Search for Shore Plant

Federal agents at New Bedford today sought the location of an unlicensed, short-wave radio broadcasting station suspected to have been in constant communication with the British rum ship, Amacitia, seized yesterday in Buzzards Bay.

The craft, believed to be only six months old, was found on inspection at the Appraisers' stores, to which she came with a Coast Guard prize crew last night, to have the last word in wireless equipment aboard, including range finders and radio compass adjustment apparatus.

Thomas Finnegan, deputy collector of customs for Boston, was directing the agents seeking the suspected shore contact of the Amacitia.

The ship's crew of 11, and several of the 13 men, seized in two speedboats near her, who were not released at Woods Hole on bail yesterday, will be arraigned in Boston before a federal commissioner. A dispute on international aspect is expected on the basis of the claim of the Amacitia's skipper, W. R. Trenholm, that his liquor was sealed below hatches and that weather drove his ship inside the limit.

The work of unloading the ship's $100,000 contraband was begun this morning, however. It includes whiskies of the Swastika, Old Colonel and Calvert brands, some of it in imperial quarts.

U. S. BEER MUST BE 3 P. C., SAYS BIG BREWER

If the United States is to have beer in the event of the election of Roosevelt and a Democratic Congress, the beer must be more than three per cent, and must be sold by the glass if any revenue is to be derived from it.

This is the opinion of George Oland, vice-president and manager of the New Brunswick Breweries, Ltd., one of the largest breweries in the Dominion. Oland expressed his views on the occasion of an unofficial welcome at St. John, N. B. to a group of Boston newspapermen and Eastern Steamship Line officials who made the first trip of the winter season aboard the Evangeline from Boston to St. John.

The Evangeline will carry on winter service between the two port for the first time in 16 years. The ship is in command of Captain W. F. Lakeman, a veteran skipper of the line.

People of New Brunswick are looking for a change in the tariff duties which will tend to increase trade between New Brunswick and the United States. They feel that both the United States and their own land would benefit greatly, should Roosevelt be elected.

COAKLEY, SWIFT, GOODWIN IN SPOTLIGHT

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

With the state campaign entering its closing days, charges and countercharges hurled by Lieut.-Gov. William S. Youngman, in a final attempt to defeat Governor Ely, today centered attention on the gubernatorial campaign.

The reply Daniel H. Coakley will make tonight to Youngman's allegations that Coakley, friend of Governor Ely, will control appointment of judges, was the sole topic of interest in political circles.

John E. Swift, Democratic candidate for lieutenant-governor, brought his campaign to the front today when he called upon Frank A. Goodwin, who he alleges is on the Youngman strategy board, to tell the people why "that champion of the people's rights" is out against Youngman's running mate, Gaspar G. Bacon.

SWIFT QUOTES GOODWIN

Swift demanded to know whether Goodwin was on the "level" in September, 1928, while Bacon was lining up votes for president of the Senate. Goodwin denounced him as a "menace" to government. Swift stated:

"You said then:

"'Gaspar G. Bacon is a menace to government for the people—he is an overbearing, autocratic representative of that element in the community that believes that government should be run by and in interest of the few.'

"Do you still believe that, Mr. Goodwin?" Swift asked.

"And if you still believe it and you are still the champion of the people's rights, why are you silent now when the man who was so objectionable in 1928 is out for the second highest office in the gift of the people of the state?"

Swift further reminded Goodwin that in the 1928 statement attacking Bacon, Goodwin had assured the people "that the fight to restore the government of Massachusetts to the citizens had just begun."

ELY LISTS JUDGES

Gov. Ely, in reply to the Youngman charge of "political" appointments of judges, countered with the publishing of a list of his appointments on the bench, for which he said he will want all the credit.

Many of these appointments were in fact promotions of Republicans, the publishing of the list disclosed.

But the center of interest is Coakley's reply tonight to Youngman.

A foretaste of what is expected is seen in a brief statement issued by Coakley, reviving the characterization of "peculiar" man made by former Gov. Frank G. Allen.

YOUNGMAN "UNAFRAID"

Youngman has burned his bridges behind him, and in his defiance to Coakley he accepts he is not "afraid" of this formidable adversary.

"It is fear of just such speeches as Coakley proposes to make which permits the Coakley methods to go on as long as they do without interruption," Youngman declared in a radio speech. "Men hesitate to tackle a man with the kind of mind and kind of tongue for which Coakley is noted."

Having issued his defi to Coakley, Youngman, in his radio speech, then turned his guns anew on Gov. Ely.

He accused the governor of "many misstatements," one of which he said was about a voluntary promise from Youngman that he would perform nothing but routine duties during the governor's absence from the state.

B. & W. INCIDENT

In sending in a special message on the Worcester & Boston Street Railway roadbed taking, he held, he was but doing his sworn duty to "stop this waste of public money."

"Of course I made no such promise," he exclaimed.

Gov. Ely charged Youngman had abandoned the issues of the campaign in a last desperate effort to besmirch and weaken the confidence of the people in the governor.

"There are certain specific things to be done for the benefit of the taxpayer," Gov. Ely declared. "The motorist who pays the gasoline tax pays it willingly because it provides him with better roads. We must be sure that the full purpose for which the tax is paid is observed by the city, county and state, and that as soon as conditions warrant, the tax must be reduced."

FOR TAX COLLECTION

The governor stated that he strongly advocates a law making it possible for cities to collect taxes in quarterly instalments so that the expense of borrowing in anticipation of these levies may be eliminated. Such a law, he said, would reduce the expenses of government by several millions of dollars annually.

Revision of the tax laws to lift the burden of government from real estate must also be given serious consideration.

Touching on prohibition, the governor warned his hearers against being lulled into the belief that because the Republican platform is somewhat from the [illegible] extreme dryness that the [illegible] is settled.

FIRST MAN HELD ON INFERNAL MACHINE LAW

The first prosecution in Boston under the new infernal machine law held William Whitehead, 28, of Salem st., Malden, in $2000 for the grand jury today as the result of an alleged assault on Michael Hurley of Broadway, South End.

Whitehead, on the night of October 4, is alleged to have exploded a gas fountain pen in Hurley's face when Hurley refused the Malden man money. As a result of the gas Hurley spent three weeks in City Hospital.

When Whitehead was first arraigned, the only charge against him was one of simple assault, on which he was given a months sentence in the House of Correction.

After hearing the evidence, Judge Elijah Adlow instructed Sergt. Justin McCarthy to get a complaint, under the new law, charging Whitehead with having an infernal machine in his possession.

COUGH SYRUP GETS HIM OFF

It wasn't intoxication, it was bronchitis.

It wasn't rum, it was cough medicine.

So, in Lynn court today, Robert T. McNamara of 745 Humphrey st., Swampscott, was found not guilty of being intoxicated and driving while under the influence.

He was arrested at 4 a. m. Oct. 16 1 Lynn by Metropolitan Patrolman James L. Sullivan, who testified his face was flushed and his breath smelled of alcohol. McNamara presented a partly filled bottle of medicine and told of bronchitis aggravated by a 200 mile drive and a football game.

A Boston druggist said the medicine contained 36 per cent alcohol.

Judge Riley said: "Discharged."

FATHER STARTS RIND DEATH INQUIRY

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 3 (AP)—A farmer living alone on a 40-acre tract near here has engaged Judge Arthur Gallagher of New York to investigate the death of his daughter, Mrs. Joan Parker Rind, New York beauty and widow of Capt. William Rind, master of the United States liner President Harding.

She was mysteriously shot in Paris August 23. The French police termed her death suicide, and they and the American consulate declared the case closed.

"I may be wrong," said her father, R. S. Parker, "but they never will convince me that my daughter killed herself. She was murdered."

He said she left New York for Paris to look after insurance on her husband who fell dead as he stood on the deck of his ship steaming into Plymouth, England, harbor, March 27, 1930.

"At that time she wrote me that $30,000 in securities and jewelry had been stolen from Captain Rind's safe. She also told me that her husband carried considerable insurance and that she was trying to collect it. Just before she sailed for Paris she had $1200 in cash and diamonds valued at several thousand dollars," Parker continued.

"The press dispatches intimated that she had been reduced to poverty and apparently had committed suicide. I knew she still had money. She could have pawned the jewelry if she really had been destitute, or even cabled her sister in New York."

LABOR HERE ALL FOR ROOSEVELT

Never before in Massachusetts has labor been so united in support of any candidate as it is today in support of Governor Roosevelt, former State Senator John J. Kearney told 600 cheering men and women at the Roosevelt Forum, 38 Court st., today.

Six hundred labor leaders are working for Roosevelt in this state and not one to any prominence for Hoover, said Kearney, an outstanding figure in Boston labor circles for a quarter century.

He told of labor's efforts to arouse Hoover to an appreciation of threatening disaster in 1929, and of the President's subsequent promises and assurances.

In 1931 labor concluded the President was "deceiving it," said Kearney.

Edwin S. Smith, State commissioner of labor, is the most courageous man who ever held the post, and if for no other reason Governor Ely should be reelected for having appointed him, the former senator added.

Other speakers were J. Arthur Moriarty, president of the Boston Central Labor Union; Charles H. McGlue, Robert Hoehen, international vice-president of the M chinists' Union; John van Vaernewijck, Sudbury state president of the phone operators' division of the Electrical Workers' Union.

Roosevelt Sweep to Include Bay State, Is Prediction

folks who don't talk much but are determined for a change.

The great turnover in Massachusetts will come in the small communities.

There are 80 towns in Massachusetts which today have Democratic organizations for the first time in their history. The registration in them has been heavy. Seekonk has a Democratic town committee consisting of one Democrat and nine erstwhile Republicans. There had never been a Democratic vote cast in a primary there. This condition is symptomatic. Folks don't join unless they are interested.

Nor do they attend rallies unless they have the urge. In Worcester last night, where Ely and Walsh spoke, the two halls of Mechanics Building were crowded to the guardrails and flowed into the streets. Worcester had seen nothing like it before. The Republicans had only a handfull. That is the case everywhere. They had less than 200 in Ford Hall, with Allen and Cox as the magnets. People go to rallies not to be converted but as a sign of their enthusiasm.

PROHIBITION TOO MUCH

In Maine, it was the low price of potatoes and pulp in rural Massachusetts, it is the general business condition. Also, the Yankee farmer has got it into his head that prohibition has been too much of an attack upon his firm notion of freedom of choice.

Drabs swept through the textile cities. Lowell, Lawrence, Fall River and New Bedford are not unlike Saco and Biddeford in Maine or Berlin in New Hampshire. Workers who have been on part time and decreased wages, or no time at all, are voting Democratic this year.

The white-collar people are shifting. In the banks and brokerage houses, when the bosses are not listening, they say they have had enough of "Hoover prosperity." They believe that Roosevelt has got "a program" and they are willing to go along with something that seems positive. These people have always voted for the G. O. P. in the past, at least when times were prosperous. Their loss is one the Republicans cannot withstand and still win.

Governor Smith's appearance brought into line nearly all his followers who were still holding off, not all but nearly all. They would not vote for Hoover anyway, the campaign tactics of four years ago still green in their memory.

OVATION TO ROOSEVELT

Roosevelt's appearance was a tremendous triumph. From Williamstown to Groton, through Republican territory, he was given a continuous ovation. He will get more of these people than Smith got four years ago. Economic conditions have changed since then. You could hardly expect a Republican to leave his party when the goose hung high, and two cars were crowded into one garage. People do not wait in the driving rain, as 6000 did in Worcester, out of idle curiosity. They shouted, "We're with you, Frank!" when he hove i to sight.

Roosevelt and Ely will carry the State, the Democrats should gain at least two more congressmen, and if it is a sweep, as I believe it to be, they will take places on the State ticket and make extraordinary gains in both the Massachusetts Senate and House.

The newspaper and magazine polls which showed Roosevelt sweeping the country, showed Hoover ahead in New England. So much so that he would easily Democratic Boston almost two to one. It could not be true. Roosevelt and Ely will win Boston by from 75,000 to 100,000.

UNDER DEPRESSION FALL.

Despite the good and honest intentions of the newspapers and magazines something went awry. One of the magazines believes that its ballots went by accident to Republican homes almost exclusively. It will repudiate its own poll so far as this section of the country is concerned and concede New England as doubtful at least.

People have changed their methods of living and their abodes the past three years. Married couples have gone back home to live, giving up their furnished apartments. Families have doubled up. If Roosevelt could run well among the people who feel the economic strain least, who live at their old homes and get their ballots in the mail, what he will do to Hoover when he gets among the real sufferers will be a question.

PROF. CORWIN BOLTS HOOVER

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—Richard Washburn Child, chairman of the Republican for Roosevelt League announced today that Prof. Edward Corwin, head of the department of politics of Princeton University, has declared himself in favor of Franklin D. Roosevelt for President. He called Corwin an outstanding Republican.

Chilcade public a letter from the Princeton professor in which he called Hoover "in his speech at Madison Square Garden made himself a great defender of the American tradition, but his attention is ridiculous."

What U. S. Needs Is Sanity in Politics, Says Landis

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 3 (AP)—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of organized baseball, has a word to say about the presidential campaign which he characterizes as a bewildering avalanche of unsane rhetoric.

Addressing a service club here, he said national politics had reached a level where "the man in the cabin cannot longer expect leadership and common sense from his government."

"What we need is to send men to national and state governments, who will pluck by the roots the cumbersome and dead timber that has been accumulating on the tree of government for the past 10 years," he declared.

"The hardest thing at this time for the people to accomplish is to pry an office-holder from his job once he gets thoroughly entrenched. Back of the somber issue of depression in this present political campaign is a greater one, representing a crying need for decent, ordinary common sense and honesty. Bring this to government and two-thirds of our task is done."

Woman Writer Loses Suit Against Wells

London, Nov. 3 (AP)—The appeal of Florence A. Deeks, Toronto author, in her suit against H. G. Wells charging plagiarism, was dismissed today by the judicial committee of the privy council. The committee ruled against Miss Deeks in her appeal from the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada which denied her suit for $500,000 from the celebrated author.

BOTTLE BARES SEA 'MURDER'

Providence, Nov. 3—What may prove to be the slaying of a girl by a former sweetheart on a boat in New York, was revealed today in a note found in a bottle which floated ashore at Field's Point.

The note, scribbled in pencil and enclosed in a green wine bottle, said:

"Lydia Burgess' body was pushed in bay between Bullock's Point and Newport by Gus Carrola, former sweetheart, on New York steamer.

"I dared not make a report to police for fear of being taken as an accessory before and after the fact, so this is the only way to find out by this bottle.

"He claims she played him dirty. He got her alone when no one was looking. He struck her on the head with this same bottle and threw her over. He said he was going to Albany. We both live in Central Falls."

The note was signed with the initials "F. A. B."

U. S. SPONSORS PROPAGANDA TO CANCEL DEBTS

Washington, Nov. 3 (U.S.)—Indignation swept congressional circles over the announcement by the Federal office of education of plans for a radio broadcast for cancellation of the $11,000,000,000 war debts owed by Europe to American taxpayers.

The propaganda is to be aired November 13 by Dr. Harold G. Moulton, of the Brookings Institution, a private research organization here, who was co-author of a recent book urging debt cancellation. It will be one of a series of so-called "educational radio programs" to be given over WJZ networkings, starting November 12 over a nationwide network of the National Broadcasting Co.

An arm of the federal government, the federal office of education, was utilized in making the announcement of the debt cancellation propaganda speech.

For a federal agency to lend its support to debt cancellation propaganda drew the fire of Rep. Heartsill Ragon (D), of Arkansas, who sponsored the provision in the Hoover debt moratorium placing Congress unequivocally on record as opposing debt cancellation. Ragon said:

"This radio program announced by the Hoover-controlled federal office of education certainly looks like part of a scheme to sell the idea of cancelling the debts to the country. Cancellation would be wrong morally.

"Democrats in Congress voted solidly for the provision in the moratorium act declaring against cancellation. A majority of the Republicans also voted for it. It would seem to me that this is final. Congress has spoken. Let the President take heed."

STRIKE TIES UP ALL BERLIN

Berlin, Nov. 3 (AP)—The main transportation system of Berlin was paralyzed today by a strike by 20,000 workers against wage cuts.

Only the state-operated Stadtbahn, a single link in the vast system, was running. Thousands of early rising Berliners were forced to brave a driving rain to get to work.

The strike was called at 5 a. m. and by 7 a. m. the police had taken over all loading points on bus, street car, subway and elevated lines as a precaution against disorder.

The police guard was set up after a few of the conveyances, manned used to carry transport employes to work, had ventured out, only to be met by a barrage of stones from strike sympathizers.

The strike was voted specifically against a wage reduction averaging about two pfennig (currently about one-half cent) per hour.

GLASSFORD SAYS HOOVER DUPED PUBLIC ON VETS

B. E. F. Fought 'Red Peril' in Camps

In his first four articles in his expose of the outrageous treatment accorded the bonus army in Washington, General Glassford blames the deplorable episode on the blunders of the Hoover administration, and relates how the ejection of the war veterans and their families was really a political plot which he sought in vain to frustrate. The fifth article in the series is herewith presented.

By BRIG.-GEN. PELHAM D. GLASSFORD
Former Chief of Police of the District of Columbia

Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.

Washington, Nov. 3.—It is absolutely untrue as President Hoover stated on Sept. 10 in his letter publishing the attorney general's attack upon the bonus expeditionary force, that it contained an "extraordinary proportion of criminal, Communist and non-veteran elements."

In making this statement President Hoover exposed himself to the charge that he sought to deceive the people as to his motive in ordering the eviction of the veterans by the U. S. Army.

Had President Hoover deigned to make himself familiar with the veterans in Washington he would have discovered for himself, as they were made up overwhelmingly of patriotic, law-abiding American citizens. He would have been utterly unable to publish the falsehood.

Crime in the district had decreased during the bonus period, there were exceedingly few who were not proved to be bona fide veterans, and at no time were there more than a couple of hundred bonus marchers among the veterans in Washington affiliated with the Communist element.

HOOVER AIDED REDS

The general policy of the Communist party is that of pacific nonresistance. On their own behalf they emphasize the futility of force as a means of gaining their end. They agitate, picket, hold meetings, make speeches and print. Their purpose is to provoke the authorities into using force, to make martyrs of them. In this instance the highest authority played beautifully into their hands.

From the outset of the movement the police had the Communists under the closest scrutiny and never for a moment were they out of control during the period when I remained free to carry out my policy of toleration and constitutional rights. They had their day only when these policies were reversed by the administration.

Leaders of the Communist party seized upon the veterans movement as an opportunity to foment discontent. They sought to get control of the veterans operating through the Workers' Ex-Service Men's League. They never had a chance to succeed until the administration opposed the gates to them.

REDS GET ORGANIZED

The only reason the Communists have been able to make capital out of the B. E. F. is because President Hoover reversed the policies I had pursued and, by an unnecessary use of the army, played into the hands of this element. He thought to make a dramatic appeal for political support to the conservative element in the country. He succeeded chiefly in giving destructive ammunition to the revolutionary elements.

Coincident with the arrival of the first group of veterans, a group of nine men from New York organized themselves as the "joint committee of the Ex-Service Men's League and Provisional Bonus March Committee." They had an office at 905 I st.

Chairman of the Washington joint committee was Emanuel Levin, a man of intelligence and education and one of the editors of the Daily Worker, organ of the Communist party.

From the day the Communists opened offices they were under close surveillance. Control over them was complete and that control was reinforced by the military police of B. E. F. working intimately with the Metropolitan police under my command.

Commander Waters of the B. E. F. was bitterly hostile to the Communists. He disagreed with them in theory and practice. He realized, also, that they sought to overthrow his leadership.

From the point of view of the police, the Communists presented a specific problem. The Communist party is not outlawed. It has candidates for President and Vice-President. It appears in the ballots under the emblem of the arm and sickle. It has constitutional rights that must be respected until they are withdrawn by due process of law. It is a curious thing that while the avowed purpose of the Communist party is to overthrow our social structure, the law confers upon it the protection of the Constitution it seeks to destroy, and guarantees it free speech, free press and free assembly.

VETS BEAT UP REDS

The Communists sought to carry their propaganda into the B. E. F. camps. The police discouraged this. Where the Metropolitan police had to stop, the B. E. F. military police carried on.

George Stembler, a rough, uncouth man, and John T. Pace of Detroit were the active field agents of the Communists in Washington. Stembler was frequently present at police headquarters to protest against the tactics of the B. E. F. military police in breaking up distribution of his party's literature in the camps. Frequently, when his agents invaded the camps, they were seized by the military police and beaten.

The Communist program called for a mass demonstration on June 8 which was to end with the presentation to Congress of a set of demands in the name of all World War veterans. To avoid trouble I granted a permit for the parade and then set about blocking any chance for its success. Vice-President Curtis, however, would not give them a permit to parade on the Capitol grounds, a policy that might have provoked trouble.

Arrangements were made with the Communist leaders to parade on the afternoon of June 7, and they agreed on a most impressive host of men whose condition of obvious need, combined with a courageous bearing and loyal sentiments made a strong appeal to the thousands of spectators. This demonstration so overshadowed anything the Communists could do that they called off entirely the demonstration they had planned for the following day.

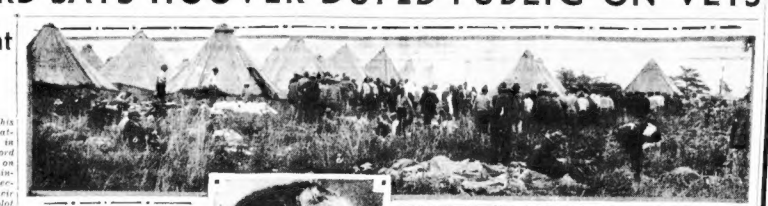
A few days later, when a Communist veterans parade was planned to take place over the same route, they were able to muster not more than 160 men. This poor showing, combined with a report that they might be stoned by veterans, resulted in the parade being abandoned.

MIGHT HAVE BALKED RIOT

It is probable, as police reports indicate, that the rioting on July 28 was precipitated by the Communist element which seized upon the opportunity to capitalize President Hoover's disastrous blunder. The administration's policy was full of danger, not from the Communists' actions, but from the natural reaction of the masses of the veterans, who felt they were being unjustly treated by the government which 15 years before they had taken up arms to defend. As it happened, this real danger did not materialize, in spite of the President's provocation.

As to the rioting, when it did occur it was completely suppressed within a few minutes. It would never have taken place but for the blundering eviction orders and not for those orders the B. E. F. movement would have been without the slightest value to the Communists or other subversive movement.

Tomorrow Gen. Glassford tells of Vice-President Curtis' demand that the war veterans be driven away from the capitol and relates the beginning of the "death march."



HE BERATED GLASSFORD
Congressman William P. Holaday of Illinois (above) berated me for "doing everything to encourage the veterans to remain," said Gen. Glassford.

GLASSFORD PUT MARCHERS IN TENTS

"When more tents were needed I secured them from the District National Guard. For this I was reprimanded next day by Gen. Crosby, commissioner, in charge of capital police. But the men were here and the only humane thing to do was to put them under shelter." That's what Gen. Pelham D. Glassford writes today.

GANG GUNS JUST MISS CANDIDATE

Detroit, Nov. 3 (AP)—Quick thinking saved Duncan C. McCrea, former assistant prosecuting attorney and now candidate for recorder's court judge, from death in a traditional gangland fashion last night.

Two men in a sedan fired at McCrea from the car after summoning him from his home.

"Hello, Dune, come on over," one of the men called from the car.

Noting a suspicious movement on the part of the man at the wheel, McCrea dropped to the ground just as a shot came from the car. Five other shots were fired as the car sped away.

RUTH NICHOLS CHEATS DEATH

New York, Nov. 3 (US)—Ruth Nichols, noted aviatrix, escaped injury early today when her monoplane was wrecked while attempting to hop off from Floyd Bennett Field for a non-stop flight to the Pacific Coast in the interest of President Hoover's campaign.

Miss Nichols crawled from the wreckage announcing she was unhurt as Col. Clarence Chamberlin, her aeronautical adviser, and several airport attaches arrived to assist her.

The plane ran off a concrete runway into the dirt on the takeoff, and, going into a ground loop, turned over on its side. Miss Nichols' presence of mind in throwing off the ignition prevented the plane from catching fire.

Sims' Contract Bridge Team Wins Vanderbilt Cup

New York, Nov. 3 (US)—The contract bridge team composed of P. Hal Sims, Willard S. Karn, Waldemar von Zedtwitz and Harold S. Vanderbilt last night captured the Vanderbilt cup from a quartet composed of David Burnstine, Howard Schenken, Richard Frey and Charles Lochridge.

Sims' team overwhelmed the others in the tournament at the Ritz-Carlton, scoring a plus of 3433 points on the 60 boards of the final round.

Burnstine's teams led by 223 points at the conclusion of the first 30 boards Tuesday night.

It was the first time Vanderbilt ever has won the trophy he put up in 1928, which has come to symbolize team supremacy in the game. It was also the first time any players had repeated victories in the tournament. Karn won once with Sims as members of the "Four Horsemen" last year. Von Zedtwitz was a member of Ely Culbertson's champion team in 1930.

As soon as they began to play last night, Sims' quartet took the lead. They made pluses both ways on the night's play. Von Zedtwitz and Vanderbilt making 5810 points playing North and South, and Karn and Sims 260 points East and West.

One of the hands which contributed to the Sims' victory was the following, with both sides vulnerable and West dealer:

HOOVER UNABLE TO SEE NEW DEAL U. S. NEEDS, SAYS BAKER

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

That President Hoover is too deeply enmeshed in the reactionary policies which he is still defending and is incapable of visioning the new deal which this country must have before economic recovery is the indictment brought against the President by Newton D. Baker.

The former Secretary of War in President Wilson's cabinet, speaking to an audience of 2000 at a Democratic rally in Tremont Temple, contended that in Franklin D. Roosevelt and John N. Garner the country has two men perfectly capable of engineering the needed readjustment.

SPEAKS AT HARVARD

It was a scholarly address made to a serious-minded gathering by one of the most forceful speakers in the country.

Mr. Baker came into Boston quietly under the auspices of the Roosevelt Business and Professional League, going direct to the home of E. A. Filene. Later in the day he addressed a Democratic students' rally in the new lecture hall at Harvard University. At this meeting he was introduced by Prof. Felix Frankfurter of the Harvard Law School. He departed on the midnight train for New York.

In Tremont Temple where every reference to the late President Wilson and Roosevelt and Garner were enthusiastically applauded, Baker drew a striking contrast between the achievements of the Wilson administration and the blunderings of the present administration at Washington.

At the outset of his address, he paid a glowing tribute to the "brilliant and gracious Gov. Ely" whose past courtesies he was glad to reciprocate, he said.

He recalled that in the spring of 1912 he had spoken in that very hall, that he followed the then candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, Woodrow Wilson. After paying a touching tribute to his former leader, the ex-Secretary of War pointed out that even then the people were beginning to say all the dire things that would happen if a Democrat were elected.

The speaker disassociated himself from the bitterness of the present campaign at the beginning of his address, while not forgetting that every cause to be successful needs enthusiasm.

SCOLDING UNWORTHY

"But in a business of such gravity, and importance as the selection of a chief magistrate of the greatest nation in the world," he declared, "I am obliged to say that bitterness and scolding and censoriousness and ugly passions of all kinds are really unworthy of us, and I brush them aside so far as I am concerned."

Touching on the campaign of "fear" which the Republican leaders are so industriously spreading, however, the speaker called upon his hearers to note that most things feared never really happen.

"And I am wondering if our friends, the adversaries, are really so terrified at the prospect of their fellow citizens running their own country. I am wondering what they would do if somebody in some other part of the world made a face at them."

POKES FUN AT HOOVER

He claimed that there has never been a "heresy" in the Democratic party which could not be traced in its origin to the Republican party.

The free silver heresy, which President Hoover has made so much ado about in this campaign, Baker said was a live issue in the days of McKinley. He recalled that it was an open question until the last minute whether McKinley would demand a free silver platform to run on.

The ex-secretary poked fun at the "grass growing in the streets" picture which President Hoover has painted if the Democrats get into office.

In striking contrast to the stumblings of President Hoover, the speaker pointed to the Federal Reserve System which was set up under the Wilson administration and which carried us through the greatest war of all time.

He characterized it as the most constructive piece of financial legislation ever enacted, the product of a man with vision to look ahead and foresee and guard against dangers to the country.

Miss Frances Perkins, labor commissioner of New York, contended that while President Hoover is an able man in lots of ways he has outlived his usefulness because he has lost the confidence of the country.

EX-POWER KING FIGHTS U. S. IN GREECE

SAMUEL INSULL, SR. A. A. PAGE

Preparing to fight against extradition to America on charges of grand larceny, embezzlement and connection with the collapse of his $2,000,000,000 power and utilities combine, Samuel Insull, Sr., consults A. A. Page, his London attorney, at hotel in Athens, Greece. The American government is seeking to have Insull brought back for trial in Chicago, where he was long a power in financial circles. A long delayed extradition treaty between the United States and Greece was ratified today in Athens but officials declined to say what, if any, immediate effect it would have upon the status of the Insull case or the efforts to get him back to America. 139 CONGRESS SEATS NOW AT STAKE IN EAST

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—Twelve Eastern states will flood polls next Tuesday with some 13,000,000 ballots in deciding seven senatorial and 132 congressional races, countless state contests, and the distribution of 159 presidential electoral votes.

Led by New York, which qualified 5,349,213 voters, greatest number in state history, most of the Eastern commonwealths have rolled up impressive registration totals.

The 12 states, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Massachusetts, West Virginia, Maryland, Connecticut, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Delaware, cast 13,479,407 ballots in 1928, with Republican pluralities going to Hoover in all but Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Of the total in the 12 states, Hoover received 7,570,304, Smith, 5,763,870 and Norman Thomas, Socialist, 145,273.

INTEREST IN THOMAS

One interesting speculation this year concerns the Socialist vote. Thomas, again a candidate, has conducted one of the most intensive campaigns in history, traveling thousands of miles and making hundreds of speeches. He acknowledges he cannot win but believes his campaign has centered extraordinary attention and that he will get the largest Socialist vote ever cast for President.

Senatorial races enliven the campaigns in New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Connecticut, Vermont and New Hampshire. All incumbents are seeking re-election. New York and Maryland now are represented by Democrats; the other five states by Republicans.

MOSES, BINGHAM FIGHTS

Among the candidates is George H. Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, president pro tempore of the Senate, seeking his third term. His Democratic opponent is former Gov. Fred H. Brown, public service commissioner.

In Connecticut, Republican Senator Hiram Bingham is opposed by Rep. Augustine Lonergan, who has accused the incumbent of "talking only of beer in times of economic distress."

The senatorial fight also is one of the major contests in Pennsylvania, where Senator James J. Davis, Republican, recently from a municipal in New York on charges of participating in a fraternal lottery, is fighting it out with Lawrence H. Rupp, Democrat, of Allentown. Governor Gifford Pinchot has demanded that Davis withdraw because of the charges.

Redistricting has caused several changes in the congressional makeup, with a net loss of one seat. Of the 132 at stake, five are congressmen-at-large, two in New York, and one each in Connecticut, Vermont and Delaware.

The last House makeup from the 12 states was 45 Democrats and 87 Republicans, with vacancies in three Republican and one Democratic districts. On September 12 Maine elected one Republican and two Democrats, upsetting a solid Republican delegation.

Following are the congressional seats to be filled and the present party makeup:

State	Cong. At Large	Now	Vacant
New York	45	2	23D 20R
Pennsylvania	36		3D 33R
New Jersey	14		4D 8R
Massachusetts	15		4D 11R
West Virginia	8		2D 6R
Maryland	6		5D 1R
Connecticut	6	1	2D 3R
*Maine	4		4R
Vermont	2		2R
Rhode Island	3		1D 2R
New Hampshire	2		1D 1R
Delaware	1	1	1R
	135	5	43D 87R

*Elected Sept. 12.

INSULL ARREST ASKED BY U. S.

Athens, Nov. 3 (INS)—The Greek government has been asked to arrest Samuel Insull, erstwhile Chicago power "czar," officials of the American legation virtually admitted today.

The grey-haired ex-millionaire, under indictment for larceny and embezzlement, was still at liberty, however, at 6:15 p. m.

The legation's admission came while Chicago authorities were en route to Athens to press demands for Insull's extradition, and closely followed action of the Athens police in tightening their surveillance over the former magnate.

Boy, 11, Wins in an Auto Suit Against Dad

Lowell, Nov. 3 (AP)—A jury in Middlesex Superior Court today awarded damages of $500 to William R. Blake, 11, in his suit against his father, William A. Blake. The damages were awarded as a result of injuries suffered by the boy when an automobile his father was driving and in which he was a passenger, overturned on June 26, 1931.

The jury found in favor of the defendant in two other suits brought against the father as a result of the same accident. The plaintiff in one of these was another son.

CANTON FIRM IN TACKLE MERGER

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—Union of four of the country's oldest fishing tackle companies was consummated today when three companies, two of which are more than 100 years old and the other in its 85th year, announced the purchase of the G. H. Mansfield Co. of Canton, Mass., which started business 111 years ago.

The G. H. Mansfield Co., dating back to 1821, had been in receivership since April. It manufactures rods, reels and flies.

The three purchasing companies are the Ashaway Line & Twine Manufacturing Co. established in Ashaway, R. I., in 1824; B. F. Gladding & Co., established in South Otselic, N. Y., in 1816, and the Montague Rod & Reel Co., established in Montague City, Mass., in 1847.

Philip Willard of Boston acted as the nominee for Boston banking interests in the sale of the Mansfield Co.

HOOVER SILENT ON THREATS

Cleveland, Nov. 3 (INS)—A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, awaited an answer today to his telegram to President Hoover, calling the chief executive's attention to a reported controversy between John Marrinan, former aid to the President, and Lawrence Richey, a White House secretary.

The telegram was dispatched to the President after Whitney said he received a letter from Marrinan in which the latter was said to have told of being threatened by Richey for his support of the candidacy of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In the letter, Whitney said, Marrinan related that Richey had telephoned him Sunday night in Washington, inquiring about a letter Marrinan had released to the press, and "then proceeded to abuse me with a fine line of profanity which exceeded anything I have ever known."

Missionary Slain in Flight, Say Chinese

Hankow, China, Nov. 3 (AP)—The belief that the Rev. Bert Nelson, American missionary held by bandits in Hupeh Province for two years, had been slain was strengthened today by further Chinese reports.

These reports quoted Communist officers captured from groups affiliated with the one holding Nelson as saying Mr. Nelson had been shot because he couldn't keep up with the fleeing forces.

Alice Writes Radio Speech in Longhand

Cincinnati, Nov. 3 (AP)—In these days of typewriters, dictating devices, and secretaries, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth toiled today, whighting in longhand her first radio address of the campaign, the speech she is to deliver over a national chain tonight in behalf of President Hoover.

"I can't typewright," she said, "though I suppose I could dictate to someone."

James Hall Starts East in Custody

Los Angeles, Nov. 3 (AP)—In custody of New Haven authorities, James Hall, film actor, whose estranged wife, Mrs. Irene Hall, asserted he left her destitute, although he was making $1000 a week, started east last night to face a criminal charge of non-support. Hall was arrested here Oct. 12.

Cancel Hyde's Speech

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP)—Cancellation of Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde's scheduled speech at Kansas City Friday night because of a conflict with President Hoover's address at St. Louis was announced today.

ZIONIST WEEK CELEBRATED

Zionists throughout Greater Boston are celebrating the 15th anniversary of the first official recognition of the Zionist movement with meetings and festivities this week.

The recognition came in 1917, when the British government announced it favored establishment of a Jewish National Homeland in Palestine.

At a meeting of Roxbury Zionists last night, Elihu S. Stone, president of the New England Zionist Region traced the history of Zionism which has swelled the population of Palestine to over 100,000.

QUINCY BOAT STEALING RING IS SMASHED

With the alleged confession by one of its members to Quincy police today, a gang which has stolen thousands of dollars worth of property from boats anchored along Quincy shore during the past year is believed to have been smashed.

Paul V. Payzent, 20, of Park ave., Squantum, when taken into custody today, led police to Hough's Neck where 1500 worth of ship furnishings, motors and supplies were recovered in a shack belonging to J. L. Harvey.

Payzent's arrest followed sentencing last week of Donald Finch 19, and William Parmelee, both of Quincy, to Dedham jail on charges of larceny.

Boston and Quincy police and Metropolitan District officers questioned Payzent. They said Payzent implicated Finch and Parmalee, and said the three stole boats and whatever furnishings and supplies they could remove, and sold them to Harvey, who lives at Hough's Neck.

Harvey will be questioned.

Payzent also confessed, police say, to stealing an auto belonging to Walter Maine of Braintree, a week ago. This auto was stripped, sprinkled with gasoline and set afire. Payzent was to be arraigned in Quincy charged with larceny.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks sunk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul; skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't use for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't care feeling; no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists, 15c, 30c and 60c.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like.

IN DEPTHS OF DESPAIR

MRS. MARY JONES lives in New England. Every month was a nightmare to her. Her letter says, "I suffered periodical pains through my head, backache and female weakness."

She tried everything. Visited clinics. Nothing helped her. Finally she gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial . . . scarcely hoping it would succeed where more expensive things had failed.

But she was surprised. Through its tonic action, it built up her health and lessened her pain. She says, "My backache is completely relieved."

To the Frenchman Dog Is Always Dog

By GILBERT SELDES

Mr. Samuel Putnam has translated more than 20 books from the French, edited the European Caravan and the New Review; now he translates the French direct, explaining their superiority complex. He writes to me:

GILBERT SELDES

"One of the things that impressed me most about my trip to the United States was the admirable attitude of Americans towards animals. It is so different from the French attitude. If an American owns a dog he treats it as a comrade and an equal. If a Frenchman owns a dog he never forgets that, after all, I am a Frenchman and this is only a dog.'

"The speaker, a personal friend of the present writer, was a French journalist, who had been sent to America by a strongly anti-American Parisian weekly of large circulation, for the purpose of making a 'reportage, with regard to breadlines, gunmen, speakeasies, etc., that should be definitely unflattering."

"'As a matter of fact,' he told me, 'I like America very much. I even prefer American cooking——'

"'Will you put all that in your articles?' I asked him.

"He gave me a smile that said all there was to say. When his 'reportage' appeared it showed, needless to state, that America is an abyss of wretchedness and that it is hopelessly headed for the demnition bowwows.

"I often wonder what the French would say and do if an American were to make a flying trip to France and then go back and write a book about France, similar to Duhamel's on America. There would, I am sure, be a considerable clamor, and we should hear much about 'American haste,' 'American superficiality,' and the like.

"But Duhamel's book is long since old stuff. Even the intelligent Frenchman, such as M. Bernard Fay, has condemned it. (Yet M. Duhamel, we must remember, is commonly looked upon not as a journalist but as a highly serious writer.) The point is, no one in the past has been more parochial than the Frenchman and, above all, the bred-in-the-bone Parisian, the attitude being, 'Seeing that I am a Frenchman or a Parisian—why travel? Where is there to go?' This, incidentally, accounts for the success of a rare exotic like Pierre Loti. It is only since the Armistice that the French have really discovered a world outside their own frontiers.

An American Reports

"As one who owns property, pays taxes and resides the greater part of the year in a village in central-southern France, and even sends his son to a French public school, this writer has an observation or two to make which he feels may not be without a certain first-hand interest. My own impressions, therefore, claim to be now more than those of a foreign resident, but at least they are not the result of a flying reportorial visit.

"To sum up my feeling with respect to my adopted fellow-citizens (as to speak), I may say that I love the French, but I have illusions about them. I find the Italians personally more charming than the French, the Germans have clear and shining virtues and the Spaniards are possibly, all in all, the nicest, certainly the most hospitable people in Europe. And yet, when I come back to France I always have the sensation some way of getting foot on home soil. I have tried to analyze this, and I think it is due simply to the fact that the French have worked out the system of liberalistic individualism to the last degree, which makes their country a pleasant place in which to live for one of my own pre-collectivistic generation.

The Danger Zone

"But it is precisely here, as I see it, that the danger for the French lies. A distinguished French professor, M. Albert Thibaudet, observes: 'Deprived not merely of its traditional, but of its traditionalistic, elements, of what is in the nature of being its heritage of the accumulated consciousness of its past and its wealth of memories, France would dry up like a withered grape.' No country, of course, can afford to throw overboard the whole body of national tradition, but, as M. Thibaudet would seem to imply, France has little else upon which to feed.

"This is equivalent to saying that she is living in the past; and she IS living in the past; political France today is still living in the eighteenth century.

"Great Nation"

"Yet France, for the most part, is politically cock-sure in the face of Fascism, Sovietism and all the rest, that her way is the only way, not alone for herself but for the world. There are, nevertheless, some thinkers who will tell you that France is the greatest stumbling block there is to the political transformation of Europe. If she is a stumbling block it is due to her cock-sureness, her seemingly ineradicable superiority-complex (it all comes back to the Frenchman and his dog). This leads the German Francophobe to put so much venom into it when he quotes the phrase, 'la grande nation.'

"But there are young Frenchmen who are beginning to see a bit differently. One of these is M. Jacques Chardonne.

"'He (the Frenchman),' remarks M. Chardonne, 'should take stock of his fundamental singularity and should refrain from judging beyond his own frontiers what he is incapable of understanding.'"

MADDEN LOSES PAROLE PLEA

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 3 (AP)—The parole board has denied Owney Madden's petition for release from Sing Sing prison.

It decided yesterday to hold him for eight months more, "at the end of which period," it announced, "his release will depend upon his conduct in prison and whether or not he has developed plans for the future which will satisfy the board that he will lead a law-abiding life."

The board's announcement was forecast after the court of appeals last week sustained the lower courts in remanding Madden to the board's custody as a parole violator. The board announced Sept. 14 that it had reached a decision on Madden's case, but would withhold announcement of it until the court action was completed.

Madden was sentenced to 20 years for the slaying of Patsy Doyle, a hell's kitchen gang leader, in 1915, and was paroled after serving seven years.

Thar's Gold in Them Thar Adirondacks, Pardner!

Pottsdam, N. Y., Nov. 3 (AP)—Once more, with powerful streams of water, an attempt is to be made to wrest gold from the Adirondack mountains.

The old search for gold, which has cost fortunes, has been renewed by W. D. Hayes of Potsdam, one-time California prospector, who declares he has found "pay dirt" at his camp on Clear pond.

Clear pond lies in the uplands of St. Lawrence County, about 20 miles south of Potsdam.

Last month Hayes, who acquired a camp on the tract, was digging gravel for improvements at the campsite. His shovel turned up glittering particles and he found, he says that the gravel assays $25 a ton.

Hayes and several friends now have staked out a mile-long ridge at the Clear Pond strike, filed papers at the state capitol and prepared their plans for damming the lake to create 400 acres of water surface. This will provide pressure for placer mining.

Gangster Taken for "Ride"

Chicago, Nov. 3 (INS)—Another hoodlum's career ended in a "one-way ride" today. His body, riddled with bullets, was hurled from an automobile in the South side. The only clue to identification was a ring bearing the initials "J. J. K." but police said they recognized him as a racketeer.

BRICK HURLED IN REVERE WAR

Feathers may yet fly in what police believe to be a poultry war among dealers on Shirley ave., Revere. But the first thing to fly was a brick.

Patrolman Amos MacAuley discovered the front window of Samuel Pozzi's poultry store shattered early today, and hundreds of crated chickens sending up a raucous protest.

Patrolman MacAuley understands enough about aeronautics to know that bricks do not fly unless they are given impetus by human agency. So Revere police today are investigating the break.

Giddyap, Napoleon, Ride Us to Chuck Wagon

WHO ALL IS THAT with its ears layed back, an onery, evil look in its eye, hammering with steel shod hoofs on Harvard's door? It's your old pal, the Army mule, as suah as you're born! And say, Jawn Harvard isn't worrying about what the Mule has got. He knows! Before the Brown game old John's educated conk was all furrowed with wrinkles ratiocinating on just how much and what the Brown Bruin had. The Bruin, y'know, managed to cuff over the Bulldog and swat Tufts without scarcely unsheathing its claws or baring its tusks. "Teddy Bear or Grizzly?" queried John, when the Brown Bruin came knocking.. "Gr-r-r-rizzly," roared the Bruin and proceded to claw up Jawn something scandalously. But old Jawn isn't asking anything of that critter who is kicking in the panels of his door and braying, "Benny Havens, oh." John knows what the Army Mule has got is plenty! The Mule showed a bit of everything in his battle with the Pittsburgh Panthers and a bit more than everything in his slaughter of the Yale Bulldog. Hey, John, don't load up that old blunderbus for b'ar. Load it up for Mule. For an Army Mule with a kick in all four hoofs and even a healthy wallop in its swishing tail!

OF COURSE, JOHN, the Army Mule undoubtedly is saving up something for his old pal, the Navy Goat, just like you are holding Jack Grady up your sleeve to aid Crickard in trumping young Mister Lassiter of the well-known Lassiters of your old pal, Eli Yale. We thought it was Eddie Herb who the Army Mule had concealed up its left hind foot to sink the Navy with. But the little birdies say Major Sasse is going to send Medford Eddie into action against you on Saturday, John. Maybe he figures Eddie, with his only recently-mended broken ankle, needs a few exercise gallops before being unleashed against the Goat, Young Vidal, Buckler Fields, Gilday and Herb—look out, John, or those Army backs will run you dizzy. Look out for the big toe of Brosnous! For us Monday morning quarterbacks and sons and daughters of old Ma Public, your tiff with the Mule is going to be simply gorgeous, John. But for you yourself, John, it is going to be plain hel—hello there, we almost caught ourself cussing!

THERE WAS A Gink just in to see us, John, who would look mighty sweet up there in the line the Army Mule is going to try to kick holes in on Saturday. About as big as any two men on your squad. So tall that he has snow on his dome, and so broad they had to call the wrecking crew to pry him through the elevator door. His brogans are battleships, and when he stepped on Shorty Burr, the office boy, on his way in, all that was left of poor Shorty was a cigarette stub, an aroma of hair tonic and the echo of a weak voice plaintively querying: "Hey, you got any Annie Oakleys for the rasslin' match?" You're right, John, it was Primo Carnera. Who else could it be?

BIG PRIMO tomorrow night is billed to fall upon and squawsh one Les Kennedy of California in the big hall George Brown weekly leases to Eddie Mack for flite shows. The North End is going to move over bag and baggage to the Arena to see the giant spaghetti bender knock Kennedy right through the ring floor. They have made the Ambling Alp a top heavy favorite over the Californian. But they made Ernie Schaaf just as big a favorite over Unknown Winston. You heard what happened to Ernie, Jawn? If Kennedy should beat Carnera tomorrow night, these explosions you will hear between 10 and 11 p. m. will only be North End barber shops and spaghetti parlors busting up one after another. If Carnera disappoints that mob, someone will be putting in an order for the largest coffin in America.

WHOA THERE, NAPOLEON, stand still, darn yuh, long enough for us to swing into the saddle—Haw! Haw! The picter of a fat man swinging into the saddle would make a hoss laff—so I can ride you down to the chuck wagon feed the rodeo people are throwing for the news hawks this evenin'. You know we were a cowboy once. An honest-to-goodness cowboy—for two days—two whole days. Frisco McKay and I quit the lumber camp we were working in and hopped a freight West to Calgary. An employment agency there was advertising for cow hands. We signed up and they shipped us to McCaffrey Brothers' ranch, about 60 miles out. They put us to work "riding fence." We rode fence one day out and one day back. When we got back—we waddled right away from there. And we still have the callouses on our pants to prove it.

ON THE STRENGTH of being a cowpuncher for two days and having callouses on our pants to prove it, we qualify for an expert, don't we?. Therefore, when the rodeo opens, you'll find us in an arena box orating to the Missus on just how rotten Colonel Johnson's busters really are, how in our younger days we tamed old Hell For Sartin, the notorious man killer of the plains, and otherwise lying like blazes. And then we'll tell her just how adept we were at steer throwing. She'll believe that. She has heard us throw the bull for years. That is one thing even Ma will admit we're good at.

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

MORE SHIFTS IN EAGLES LINEUP

Boston College's preparation for the oncoming Villanova outfit goes on apace, as the boys say—a very leisurely pace. A few shifts in the lineup here and there, but not much change in grid temperature.

Not that Head Coach Joe McKenney is not making the most of his available time. He is. But Mc-Kenney is inordinately fond of doing things slowly and with great thoroughness.

For example, with but two days left in which to acquaint his eleven with some of the rudiments of the Villanova attack, McKenney will not teach definite defensive assignments to his secondaries until today.

AIR LESSON TODAY

An elaborate pantomime of Villanova's attack was staged by Bill Kelleher's freshman eleven for the benefit of the B. C. varsity line. The chief Villanova plays through the line were carefully rehearsed.

Villanova's air game, thoroughly scouted by Kelleher last week, still remains in the B. C. assistant coach's notebook. This will be the lesson for today, as McKenney sends his team through a scrimmage with the freshmen.

Items of the Boston College varsity personnel, like the poor, we have always with us.

It now developes that Henry Plausse may play at left guard in place of Gerry Slamin on Saturday. Slamin has an injury which has been an affliction since early in the season and may keep him out of work against Stuhldreher's club.

Paul Donahue, an end, has definitely divorced himself after a more or less futile candidacy for that position, and will go back to being a tackle again.

Now comes Joe Ryder and his 220 pounds of guard material to make a bid for end recognition under Coach Bill Ormsby. Joe has the recommendations of Line Coach Harry Downes, and Ormsby has a problem on his hands.

Because regular Center Romano is still a silent sufferer from neck boils, Eddie O'Brien has been working in the center of the B. C. line and will be ready to play Saturday if McKenney needs him.

Tosi and Killeles at the wings, and Couhig and Reynolds at the tackles remain intact as the rehearsal at the Heights draws to a close. McKenney expects to have all his regulars in shape by game time.

MEET KID THUNDERBOLT

BUSH OF STATE COLLEGE IS THE M'COY

Leading scorer of the country. Visions of a pigskinning terror. A giant raging across the chalk marks. You tell 'em wrong.

The imposing height of 5 feet 8½ inches. The impressive weight of 145 pounds. And the tape reels out 34½ around that magnificent chest.

Meet Louis Bush. Third high scorer in the country last year. And was ahead this year. Sixteen touchdowns for 96 points so far. A mild little chap. Just a gentleman from Mass. State College.

Let's look at his last two games.

MUST BE WRONG

October 22, Mass State 25, Worcester Tech 0. The Turner Falls lad scored three times. Number one, a mere gamboll of 32 yards around left end. Number two, a trifling jaunt of 97 yards after catching a punt. Number three, a gay tripping over 25 yards after a pass from Sheff.

October 29, Mass State 21, Amherst 6. Two scores. Number one, Louis stumbled 38 yards after a pass from Sheff. Number two, facetious Louis crashed Amherst for a score from the one-yard line.

We must be wrong. That last one makes us look bad. Just a builder-upper all. Only 37 yards per score for these two games.

Don't you realize, Louis, how unfair that is? You should run at least 175 yards to satisfy Mr. Skeptic. When you come up to play Tufts you will have to eat a punt in Davis sq. Then you can score a real touchdown. About three-quarters of a mile.

Two Gael Stars Out

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—The galloping Gaels of California, St. Mary's football team, today invaded New York city to again meet Fordham at the Polo Grounds Saturday. St. Mary's won in 1930, 24-12.

FORTY IN SQUAD

In the group which completed its three day trip from San Francisco were 40 players in charge of Coach E. P. (Slip) Madigan and his half dozen assistants and 60 rooters.

The arrival was somewhat hindered by the slimming illness of Mr. Madigan who, on the 1929 trip with influenza on the trip and who had to be removed from the train on a stretcher, threatened with pneumonia.

TWO ON SICK LIST

The team, undefeated this year and hailed as a great outfit comparable to some of Knute Rockne's great Notre Dame teams appeared in fine fettle. Madigan said all his regulars were in shape except Wayne Pendleton, guard and Charles Baird, halfback.

Pendleton is suffering from an attack of influenza, and Madigan said he would not be able to play Saturday. Baird, a triple threat man who had been counted on to carry much of the burden against Fordham, has a bad leg and Madigan was doubtful whether he would get in the lineup.

CRIMSON IN POOR SHAPE FOR KICKING MULE

By BILL GRIMES

Under cover of darkness the vanguard of the Army, comprising the combat troops, moves into this sector late today and will establish camp at the Belmont Spring Country Club, where it will remain until it swings into battle against Harvard in the Stadium Saturday.

Harvard and Army have both been handicapped by bad weather during their final preparations for the battle for which they have waited before the first full house of the season at Allston.

Due to the Williams and Maryland game last week, West Point is in perfect physical condition for the Harvard game, some of Head Coach Ernie Casey's cohorts are still suffering from the effects of the Dartmouth game of two weeks ago.

The Harvard squad will hold its final drill tomorrow afternoon, but the varsity, freshman and second teams will be seized on new defensive.

SCOUTS GLOOMY

Crimson scouts have watched Army in action in each game this season and are far from optimistic over the outcome of the 18th Harvard-West Point game.

As usual, Army is a veteran team and rated as one of the best in years. After losing an 18 to 13 decision to Pittsburgh, the Cadets were overcome with three touchdowns against Yale, against whom it could have piled up an overwhelming score.

Army is still using the Warner system, which was developed by Head Coach Ralph Sasse when he succeeded Capt. Biff Jones. The Army attack is built around either a single or double wing back formation. Most of the running plays get their start from a single wing back power while the majority of the passes develop from a spread buck-field.

With a backfield composed of Vidal Fields, Brown and Kilday, the Army generates terrific power and, at top speed, all three running backs, while Kilday is capable of hitting in line with the effectiveness of a charging fullback. Vidal, linked with the Warner style of attack makes the Army running attack doubly elusive.

STAR PASSER

Army has a great variety of forward passes and one of the best in the college ranks in Ken Wells.

Unless Harvard has developed an aerial defense this week it is in danger of being run ragged.

With Dick Vidal as field general, West Point mixes up its air attacks with telling effect. At times Army crowds its ends, then sends one across and the other straight down the field. At other times Army crowds its ends, then sends one across and the other straight down the field and occasionally both go out into the flat zones. Ken Sasse has backs in all zones for passes.

The Army's success through the air is due in a large measure to the unerring accuracy of Fields. During practice before the Yale game, Fields threw 60 passes to Ends and backs, and he was, much to the chagrin of the Harvard scouts, who looked on.

The first and second teams have not had any contact work since the Brown game. The physical condition of the squad did not warrant a scrimmage, which will be a serious handicap for Army Monday when the Cadets battle the club Harvard has met this fall.

Jack Crickard and Johnny Leddy were in the signal drill with Team A while Bill Francis was at tackle on the second team.

There is a strong likelihood that Frank Gleason will be in the starting lineup for Harvard and, if so, he will back up the line with Warren Casey. John Dean is out of Saturday's game, according to an announcement, and therefore Charles Cronin will probably return to his No. 2 position on the varsity.

IRISH STAND BY ANDERSON

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 3 (AP)—Jess Harper, Notre Dame athletic director, today defended (Hunk) Anderson and spiked rumors that a new football coach would be hired for next year.

"Rumors can fly where they will, but Anderson will be back at Notre Dame as head football coach," Harper said with emphasis. "The fact that he lost a game is no reason to fire him. Why, we at Notre Dame feel he has done a fine job. He stepped into a tough job and we like the way he has handled things.

"Any reports to the contrary are mere propaganda and should be treated as such."

Anderson worked the regulars overtime last night, even hauling out the ghost ball and turning on the lights to extend the practice session. When it was all over he still was dissatisfied.

"The boys aren't clicking," he warned his assistants.

Is FOOTball—Yost Defense of Michigan

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 3 (AP)—Kicking, says Fielding H. Yost, is the hardest thing to learn in football.

"And," continues the Michigan football coach emeritus, "it's the part of the game that pays big dividends when it is done right."

Yost scorns the widespread belief that Michigan has won many football games in which they were outgained. His argument is that the opponent might gain more ground carrying the ball, but Michigan more than made it up by expert punting, by running back punts or in some other way.

"The proof," he said, "is that you have to get the ball down to the other end of the field to score, and the only way to do that is to outgain the other team. Princeton carried the ball 126 yards rushing, and we gained only 105, but Regeczi had it over them 200 yards on punts. Just remember that the name of the game is FOOTball, and if you're going to take kicking out of it you better change the name and call it 'running-with-the-ball' or something."

3 NEW LINEMEN WIN B. U. JOBS

Upon three newcomers who have only been on the squad two weeks, rests Boston University's chances against the University of Vermont at Burlington, Saturday. These boys are expected to give the Terriers line the reserve strength it has needed all year.

The new men are Freddie Vasilianskas, guard; John Petrosky, tackle, and Herb Cohen, end.

Vasilianskas, one of the many products of Benny Murray, Norwood high coach, weighs 180 pounds and is one of the most rugged linesmen on the squad. In scrimmages this week he has been outstanding and there is a chance that he will win a starting job before the season is over.

MacMANMON SATISFIED

Line Coach MacManmon has been showing signs of satisfaction for the first time in weeks over the work of his tackles. Until last week he only had three. Horrie Call, George Rachenides, and Roland Hicks. Now with Petrosky he has two pair and he feels he can accomplish something.

Petrosky only weighs 180 but he is tall and rangy and knows tackle play.

The other member of the new trio, Herb Cohen, looms as the best end on the squad. He can take out a tackle better than any other wing on the squad and knows how to break up interference.

Although none of these boys will start, Coach Lane has stated that he is greatly satisfied with their work and that they will see plenty of action against the Catamounts at Burlington Saturday.

ALIBERTI TO START

Early in the week it looked as though Vasilianskas would start at guard as the coaches did not know whether Al Aliberti's lip would be healed sufficiently to permit him to play; but the Portland boy scrimmaged yesterday and Coach Lane announced today that Al would start at his guard position against Vermont.

Caseys Play Polycops

The North Cambridge Caseys will try to break the winning streak of the Somerville Polycops at Russell Field Sunday. After the demonstration against the Fittons the Cantabs feel they can add the Somerville club to their list of victories.

The country's high scorer on the gridiron is Louis Bush, (above, in three poses) Turners Falls youngster, who is starring at Massachusetts State.

FOOTBALL WILL LIVE—STAGG

Chicago, Nov. 3 (AP)—Amos Alonzo Stagg has had a closeup of American football's big parade for a half century but can't see the end in sight.

"America always will have football without a great change from the game as played today," the 70-year-old University of Chicago coach said reflectively in discussing past and future. "The game is here to stay."

"A lot of people enjoy football but don't understand its real purpose. Youth is restless and demands what is commonly known as roughhouse. They like to fight or tussle playfully and football gives them a chance to do it. That's why football is popular and why so many play it from the smallest sandlot to the largest university."

Coacr Hanley Takes Shot at Radio Broadcasters

By DICK HANLEY
Football Coach, Northwestern University

Chicago, Nov. 3 (INS)—The advent of the radio and the broadcasting of sporting events has brought the question of "editorializing" into prominence. The tendency of certain radio announcers to pass judgment on the efforts of the team, to second guess and oftentimes pan certain individuals has come to a point where resentment is being aroused.

Radio announcers might well follow the example of our leading writers in a sporting event, especially an amateur contest such as college football where the players are all boys, trying their hardest to give the best that is in them at all times.

Our foremost sport writers confine their efforts to giving the facts as they transpire. They paint a word picture that conveys to the readers what has actually happened on the field of play. From such an account an accurate idea of what took place is obtained.

The radio announcer is even less qualified to second guess than the writer, since he must utter his remarks as they flash into his mind at the moment without having time to reflect on what he has just seen. More than anyone else, he should let the players speak for themselves.

Usually the second guesser has little working knowledge of the game, or if he had he is not in a position to observe certain weaknesses that a quarterback on the field is trying to take advantage of. The quarterback knows that the defense might have exposed itself at a certain spot and it is here that the quarterback is striking.

I appreciate that the radio announcer is working under trying conditions, that he must think fast and depict the events as rapidly as they occur. But he should, as a consequence, feel a sense of obligation to the players, since in giving his opinion he is not presenting it to just a few, but to many thousands.

KEN STRONG AT BRAVES FIELD

Ken Strong and the Staten Island Stapletons will receive a warm reception from the Boston Braves when they play the local entry Sunday afternoon.

The Staples play a wide open game with a variety of lateral and forward passes. As they also have a goodly number of big and elusive ball carriers and fine backfield, it is not surprising that they have scored such extensive gains.

This style of play is the more attractive for spectators to watch. Coach Wray has been schooling his men on this style of play and promises a surprise for the invaders.

Many player stars are on the Staten roster in addition to the sensational N. Y. U. luminary, Ken Strong. Bob Campiglio, who was national collegiate high-scorer in 1931 while with the West Liberty Teachers College of West Virginia, is their quarterback.

DONOVAN HURT IN PRACTICE

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 3—Dartmouth preparations for the New Hampshire game were hampered considerably when four examinations prevented several of the varsity players from reporting for practice.

Examinations did not affect the first team, however, and there was but one major change as the regulars ran through a brief signal drill.

Walt Crandell of Bronxville, N. Y., promising junior fullback, replaced Bob Donovan, who advanced to the first team, yesterday, when Roald Morten was removed because of injuries.

Donovan was shifted to the second team and figured prominently in a scrimmage against the scrubs, scoring a touchdown for his team. He was later injured, partially dislocating his shoulder, which he had dislocated earlier in the season, and the extent of his injury is not certain.

JAMAICA'S 'GINGER' LEAVES SCHOOL FOES DIZZY

DUFFY'S BOYS HAVE TITLE ASPIRATIONS

By BILL CONNELL

Speed, speed and more speed has been the chant of Jim Duffy, coach of the unbeaten Jamaica Plain high eleven this fall.

Once in a while Coach Jim tries a new theme on interference. His boys have caught the tune and their speed and blocking have them out in the front of the Boston schools' football drive.

Jamaica Plain again proved its ten flying ability by trouncing the strong Dorchester eleven, which had lost only one other game, 19-0, at Fenway Park in a Wednesday contest. Now the Jamaica followers have visions of a Boston title. The visions may be realized.

Duffy, slim, keen-eyed mentor of the past 13 years at Jamaica Plain, is banking his little chances on the two items mentioned—speed and interference. He says that if given these two things their power, deception and all the other grid factors shouldn't worry any coach.

MUST BE CORRECT

From Jamaica's captain down the line the boys have learned to keep in high gear all the way. And their blocking is excellent. The team is winning. Duffy's ideas must be correct.

The Jamaica captain is one of the prime reasons for the team's success. He is Fullback Herb Kelleher, a great all-around performer, and standout captain as well.

When anything takes the coach away from the squad for a few moments, Herb keeps the boys working. And they like to follow their leader, which is the finest kind of praise any school team can give its captain.

KNOWS PLAYS, RULES

It is a smart team, and knows its plays, and also the rules. Speaking of it is interesting to note that Coach Duffy likes all the new points of the grid code. He says that the dead ball ruling, where a player falls or touches the ground, excepting with hands or feet, is a big improvement. And this is a ruling which has been criticized by many grid fans.

Both games of the Wednesday double bill at Fenway Park were won by 19-0 scores, Jamaica Plain beating Dorchester and Commerce blanking Mechanic Arts.

John McGovern of Lynn Classical and Nick Cairifio of Haverhill continue to stand out among all the schoolboy wings of the year. These two, with many other stars, are ready to make their final fight for all recognition in the November classic.

HARVARD '36 TO MEET JAYVEES

Civil war was declared in the Harvard football camp today.

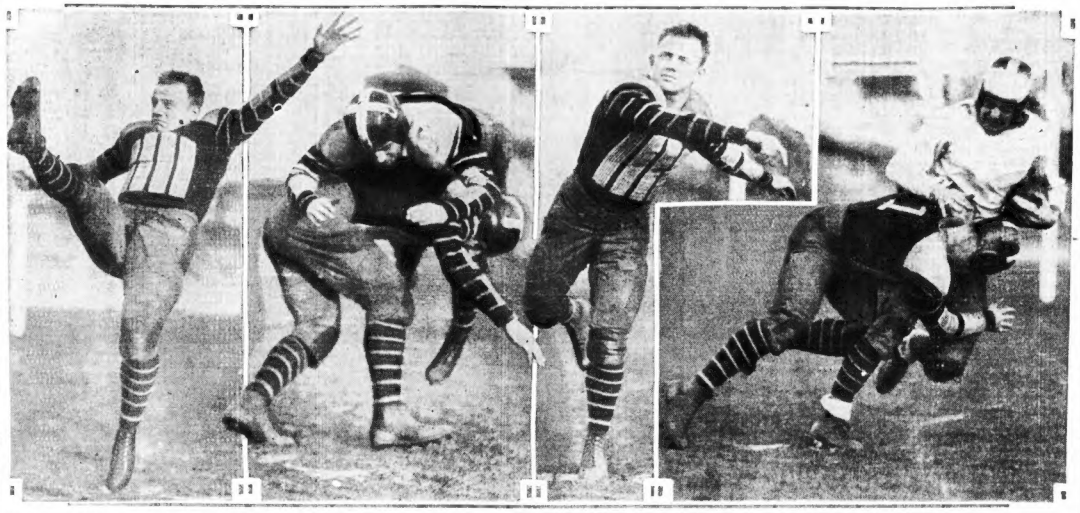
The rival generals, Jimmy Knox of the junior varsity and Butts Bond, freshman leader, will open the combat tomorrow afternoon when they send their respective charges onto the field to decide the undergraduate championship of Soldiers Field.

This annual clash between the jayvees and the frosh marks the high mark of the season, and a bloody battle usually ensues when the two meet.

The freshmen have had the advantage so far this season holding the varsity to a single touchdown in their only scrimmage whereas the regulars have been able to trample through the juniors almost at will.

The freshmen will field a galaxy of Greater Boston high and prep school stars. Coach Eddie Casey ranks the frosh almost on a par with the varsity.

Rindge Tech Pilot Prize Catch for Some Smart Star-Angling Coach



Vito Ananis, Rindge Tech 180-pound quarterback, boots one far down the field. A fine kicker is this sturdy youngster. He doesn't stop at kicking, however.

A perfect shoulder block! Ananis smashes a teammate up and out of some play in scrimmage. When Vito hits 'em they stay hit. His size makes him an effective interferer.

Zip! And Ananis' pass rifles away, right to the mark. His tosses are accurate.

What good does it do to try to sidestep Aanais? And rightly so, hits a ball carrier with all the gentleness of a battering ram. Ananis' tackling has halted many rushes of Rindge Tech foes this year. And will halt plenty more.

ADAMS HITS AT NEW ICE RULE

Sharp criticism against the board of governors of the National Hockey League, of which he is a member, for adding the suspension of "hold out" players to the hockey code was made today by Charles F. Adams, president of the Boston Bruins, in a statement to the Associated Press.

"I think it would be better taste," he said, "for the clubs of the National Hockey League to act singly in such matters and ask for league action only when such a course is permitted or necessary within our present constitution and by-laws.

"There might be instances where a majority of the governors would reach an opinion contrary to that of the protesting club and in favor of the player. Therefore I do not advise, neither can I support any league threat to suspend a player under such conditions which but supplements the ample authority now possessed by the clubs.

"I have no sympathy with any player who is a 'hold out,' provided he has been offered a reasonable contract within the limits of league requirements and at a figure that his club can afford to pay. Clubs now have the privilege of suspending a player for valid reasons. In respect to 'hold outs' the present authority and power of a club is ample to such an emergency.

"The Boston Bruins would prefer to act in such cases without involving other clubs in the league in what would appear to be a monopolistic policy and I am going to so advise the president of the league that the Boston club is not in sympathy with such a regulation."

President Adams said he was unable to attend the meeting which approved the new "hold out" rule but gave his proxy to Frank Calder, the National League head, and has not yet been informed how it was recorded in the vote on that new hockey legislation.

Grannon Tips Irish Off to Ananis, Rindge Ace

Mr. Heartley Anderson,
Notre Dame University,
South Bend, Ind.
Dear "Hunk."

I wonder if you could find any use for a quarterback I have in mind? Of course he is only a schoolboy. But I have hopes he will grow older as well as better. And he is Polish enough for your Irish team.

He is sparsely thatched but don't let that fool you. This lad is only 17 years old. He hasn't attained his full growth as yet. Later he will rise above his present height of 5 feet 11 inches.

And he isn't as well developed as he might be. Right now he weighs only 180 pounds. He isn't any chunkier than Gus Sonnenberg and, of course, Sandow was stronger.

Of course I told you he plays quarterback. He does several other things too.

DOES EVERYTHING

He runs the ends. He crashes the line with a boom. He passes like Big Bertha. And he punts. A real triple threat, eh, coach?

But look, "Hunk," he doesn't stop at that. He's a serious threat. He blocks like Fiienc's building. And that noise you heard last Saturday at 4 p. m. wasn't the cheering at the Harvard Stadium. It was merely his way of tackling a Revere back. He kicks off, too, coach.

And he'll stay eligible. A hard plugging student who is never in difficulties. And the most popular in the school. No ego there.

His name isn't Frank Merriwell. It's Vito Ananis. He plays football for Rindge Tech. You know Rindge played Revere last Saturday. Now Revere is no set-up for any club. They are tough. This Bernie Sochet, their quarterback, is a natural and will be heard from at college. And Mallio, Majewski and Crivello, in their line, are no cream puffs.

VITO STARTS

Vito wasn't in the best of shape Saturday. A couple of his ribs were cracked. Somebody must have hit him with an axe. He never got them in a football game. Coach Tommy Murphy used him sparingly on the theory that a wounded bear is most dangerous to the enemy. Thoughtful, considerate Tommy.

Well, anyway, in the second period Revere's Mr. Sochet collaborated with Revere's Mr. Corrin to produce a beautiful touchdown after a lateral pass and a run of 40 yards. This touched our hero right in a tender spot under the split ribs. So he decided to do something about it. He did.

Vito grabbed the ensuing kickoff on his nine-yard line and deposited the ball on his 40. He then passed to Donabed, a swell Rindge back, for 20 yards more.

Things not proceeding fast enough, Vito unleashed himself at the Revere right tackle, crashed through and out-galloped the secondaries for a 40-yard run and a touchdown.

Well, Coach, after seeing the New England college backs I have picked Vito for my All-Eastern team.

RILEY GRANNON

ENGLISH-B. C. H. AWAIT GUN

Boston English and Boston College high elevens meet tomorrow afternoon at Fenway park in one of the annual highlight games of the Boston schedule.

This game is expected to outdraw most of the doubleheaders of the card. The fans are that interested in the battle.

English has been beaten once this year, while B. C. high tied Latin early in the season, and plenty of fans will be using the English and Latin stands against the Eaglets as a basis for comparison before the Thanksgiving clash of the two famed Boston public schools.

Jack Fingleton, Lawrence right guard, has battered his way to the fore this season. Fingleton is a fast running guard on offense and defensively appears as a stone wall to any foe.

Another fine guard is here in Boston, Jerry O'Callaghan, six-foot, three-inch, 190 pounder of the Boston Latin eleven.

MANLEY TRIES OUT 3 PUNTERS

Coach Lew Manley of Tufts is working Greg Jumbos hard today in his efforts to select a suitable punter for the Lowell Textile game at Tufts Oval on Saturday.

Johnny Grinnell, regular end and ace kicker of the team, has not been reported for practice, and is not likely to be ... for heavy duty against Lowell Textile. End Fred Oliver still limps, and probably won't start this week.

Roy Woodworth, giant tackle; Ed Batchelder, another tackle, and Ed Monier, a halfback, can take over the kicking. Woodworth gets off very long, high punts, but is not fast getting the kicks away.

Monier is an able left-footed booter, while Batchelder also is a good punter. Woodworth of the trio, is most likely to get the kicking job Saturday.

Clarence Hammond of Swampscott, and Jake Yaglan of Medford are the starting wings for Saturday.

With the two regular ends on the casualty list, and a new starting fullback, Manley's job this week is no easy.

"I expect a hard game Saturday," said Manley today. "Lowell Textile has a good team. With several of our most dependable performers on the sick list, the starters Saturday must be at their best if we are to win this game."

Bostonians Behind New Florida Auto Racing Wrinkle

Here's the latest sports wrinkle, fans—night automobile racing under the pari-mutuel betting system. They've built a $100,000 track in Miami, Florida, and with the opening of the Florida season the races will open.

And who do you think is behind this new sports scheme. Two native Bostonians, Joe Doherty and Ray Shanahan, and an adopted Bostonian, Dick Dunn, former general manager of the Boston Garden.

They say there's nothing new under the sports sun but the Doherty-Shanahan-Dunn wrinkle certainly is a new one. It is the first time night auto races with legalized betting ever was attempted. The autos certainly are going to give the bantails a run for their money.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

I DROPPED INTO Jerry Buckley's Gym on Friend st. to get a peek at the man Walter Friedman (Good Time Charley to you) likes to refer to as the NEW Carnera.

I am always interested in watching a heavyweight toss punches, especially when he weighs more than 190 pounds.

I never could get excited about 174 to 180 pound heavyweights like Mickey Walker, Jack Delaney and Tommy Loughran.

It is my opinion that fellows under 180 pounds would do themselves and the public a great deal of good if they battled as light heavyweights. Now don't toss the name of old Bob Fitzsimmons at me. I know Fitz did a good job at heavyweighting even though he seldom weighed as much as 180 pounds. Fitz, however, was the exception.

Jack Dempsey weighed 183 pounds the day he knocked out Jess Willard, while Jack Sharkey only scaled 182 pounds when he licked Floyd Johnson and 188 when he trounced Harry Wills.

Dempsey and Sharkey between 190 and 195 were greater fighters than when they were when in the carefree 80's.

• • •

Carnera a Mere 260

I WAS NOT alone in my desire to see Carnera in action. Some 500 paying customers sat in the Jury boxes at Buckley's gym. I use the word jury boxes in all seriousness.

The latest Buckley gym has rows of seats with a partition in front of the first row. These seats are set off in sections and are set back against the walls on two sides of the building. The "jurors" came to see Primo train and pass judgment on him.

After Carnera pranced around a bit on the gym floor, he stepped into the ring. Walter Friedman adjusted a special set of sparring gloves. Each glove weighed 22 ounces, which is six ounces heavier than the regulation gloves.

"Carnera never uses all of his strength," said Friedman. "If he did he would send all of his opponents to the hospital. Sharkey is the only man who has ever been able to master Primo. It was because Sharkey keeps moving around, weaving and bobbing. Sharkey is smart.

"Carnera will beat Max Baer in New York on December 9. Then he will be ready to take on either Schmeling or Sharkey. Primo is sure to beat Schmeling."

• • •

Boxes Six Rounds

CARNERA THEN boxed two rounds each with George Glover, Paul Chute and Eddie Callahan. He moved around the ring with the speed of a 180 pounder. He punches sharp and straight with his left, while he throws a short right hand punch which is very difficult to get away from. Imagine being nailed on one jaw with a right hand smack backed by 260 pounds of flesh and bone!

I have never seen Ace Kennedy of California, who meets Carnera in a ten-round bout at an Argonne A. A. show at the Arena tomorrow night. Kennedy has beaten Max Baer and some other pretty fair fighters and figures he will upset Carnera.

Maybe Kennedy is right, but I believe he will have a different idea of Carnera after tomorrow night's bout. Nobody is tossing Primo around much these days.

The Football Roundup

By the Associated Press

Berkeley, Calif.—They call Henry W. Schaldach, California back, "Hard Luck Hank" and his effort to get into a game against Southern California prove the name is good. In 1930 he wrenched his knee a few days before the game; last year he fractured a bone in his left wrist early in the season and got back into action a week after the Bears met the Trojans. His third and last chance comes Saturday.

Minneapolis—This seems to be the difference between a substitute and a regular. When Bruin Berg, Minnesota reserve quarterback, went to tackle the dummy yesterday, he sprained an ankle. Jack Manders, regular fullback, took his turn and tore the dummy from its moorings.

South Bend, Ind.—Notre Dame's football players have one very good bit of consolation for their defeat by Pittsburgh last week. Some one recalled one of the late Knute Rockne's favorite sayings: "No team is really great until it has been defeated once. If it can come back and win, then it's a real team."

Philadelphia — Pennsylvania's preparations for the Pitt game are being conducted in strictest secrecy. Even the students couldn't get in to see their team practice yesterday until just before dark and then they saw only a brief routine drill.

Pittsburgh—Football dramas don't happen often twice in the same way but Pittsburgh has a few hopes that the dramatic play of the Notre Dame game will be repeated against Pennsylvania. At least the Panthers are holding Bob Hogan, who one entry last week started the Panthers toward victory, in reserve again and planning to start Miller Munjas at quarterback.

Morgantown, W. Va.— The backs got most of the public credit for West Virginia's victory over Marquette last week, but the coaches are heaping praise upon Arthur Swisher, a 165 pound guard. He was all over the field, they say, getting more than his full share of tackles and opening big holes in the Marquette line on the offense.

Syracuse, N. Y.—The careers of Vic Hanson, Syracuse coach, and Harry Robertson, who tutors the Oglethorpe team which faces the Orange Saturday, show a great similarity. Both played end and were Syracuse captains under the coaching of Chick Meehan. Hanson was chosen for the All-America team and Robertson was mentioned frequently for high honors.

San Francisco—Maxie Kraus, Gonzaga's High scoring backfield ace, is the chief worry of the San Francisco Dons who meet the Bulldogs here Sunday at Kezar Stadium.

ROOKIES PUSH REGULARS FOR ICE BERTHS

Toronto, Nov. 3 (AP)—One of the most polished crops of rookies which ever attacked the old guard of the National Hockey League is trying to win the few available places on the big league teams this season.

Reports from the training camps scattered through Canada and the experienced Minor League players, who outnumbered the Amateur candidates this season, are about the only ones who have a chance to make the grade.

Carl Voss, last year's star of the Buffalo Bisons, appears to have accomplished the task of breaking into the lineup of the New York Rangers. Alfie Moore, formerly of Cleveland, and Andy Aitkenhead of the defunct Bronx Tigers, are fighting for the Ranger goal-tending job, left vacant when John Ross Roach was sent to Detroit.

A number of other International League "grads" also seem headed for the big time. Ken Doraty of Syracuse has to beat out Charlie Sands, who joined the stars late last season, to get a job with the Stanley Cup winners, the Toronto Maple Leafs, but Ronnie Martin of Buffalo seems to have clinched a job with the New York Americans.

McFAYDEN CAUGHT ON

The American League, which gave up its Chicago team when it came back into the fold of organized hockey, sent most of the Shamrocks' players and a good many others up for big league trials. Donnie McFayden, a wing, and Burr Williams, defense, seem to have caught on with the Chicago Blackhawks.

Eddie Wiseman, Gordon Brydson and Tony Prudonik appear to be the best of the numerous Shamrock players who went to Detroit.

The Montreal Maroons have been trying out two former Canadian Olympic stars, Hack Simpson of the Winnipegs and Hugh Plaxton, who played on the famous varsity grads along with Dave Trottier, who is now an established Maroon star.

Paddy Byrne, who was the American League all-star backstop with Kansas City two years ago, is making a strong bid for the Maroon net-minding job.

Gus Forslund of Duluth is another American League player who seems to have won a big league job. He plays with the Ottawa Senators.

BRUINS LIGHT ON NEWCOMERS

The Montreal Canadiens and Boston Bruins are "light" on newcomers. Boston with only Obe Hexter from the Cubs and the Canadiens with several fair candidates from their Providence "farm" in the Canadian-American League. Of these Roger Cormier, left winger, appears to have the best chance of sticking with the flying Frenchmen.

178 Attempt to Join Montreal Ice Team

Montreal, Nov. 3 (AP)—It must be a record of some sort when 178 hockey players attempt to join one team.

The Junior Royals last year's Eastern Canada finalists in the Memorial Cup competition, called a practice last night. No less than 178 players overflowed the dressing rooms and crowded the ice at the Forum until the work-out was a total loss.

GEORGIA'S TWO SENATORS FOR DRY REFORM

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—Georgia's two United States senators said at Democratic national headquarters today that if Franklin D. Roosevelt is elected President on Nov. 8 they expect Southern Democrats in Congress to support some sort of prohibition modification legislation in the short session in December.

Senator Walter F. George said:

"If Roosevelt is elected there certainly will be legislation—some sort of a modification bill—probably in the form of a tax on certain beverages."

Senator John S. Cohen said:

"Every Congressman and every Senator running for office on the Democratic ticket in the South is standing squarely on the Democratic platform on prohibition—and you know what the Democratic platform stands for.

"All Republican candidates in the South are running on a platform directly opposed to their party's national platform."

Senator George said he did not think James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic national committee had made any overstatement in placing the probable majority for Governor Roosevelt at 10,000,000 votes.

Glassford's address is to be broadcast over the National Broadcasting Company's coast-to-coast hookup.

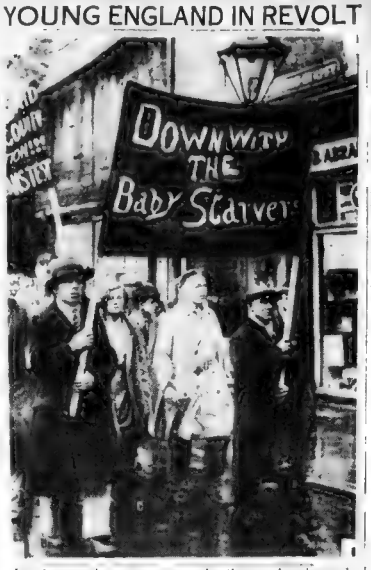
YOUNG ENGLAND IN REVOLT



Less demonstrative, more conservative than an American college campus are the precincts of England's ancient Oxford—but not last week. Even the girl friend marched under the inflammatory banner of the students, as you can see. (Int. News Photos.)

Change Needed Says 'Al' on One Page But Just Read Another

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

As an editor Alfred E. Smith is obviously not letting his right hand know what his left hand doeth. This, by the way, is becoming a popular gesture with editors. Many of us have been edified by the spectacle of the New York Herald-Tribune boosting violently for Hoover on the editorial page, while on another page Walter Lippmann boosts, much less violently and more critically, for Roosevelt. And Heywood Broun, who was once discouraged from continuing on the old World because he differed from Lippmann the editor on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, hails the new liberalism as a sign of promise in American journalism.

R. E. ROGERS

Similarly, while Editor Smith on the editorial page of The New Outlook, second number, is showing why we must have a clean slate and a Democratic administration, he prints on another page a drastic article showing that no political change can possibly cure an evil which is so deep and fundamental that it is bound to destroy our entire present system.

No, he is not allowing Communism to be preached. The article is titled "What is Technocracy?" The answer is that "Technocracy" means the rule of the machine-technology and is the name of an association of engineers who some dozen years ago began an extensive analysis of our industrial and agricultural growth, based upon "the mathematics of the theory of Energy Determinants" and postulating that the new type of high-powered equipment "would be far-reaching in its effect on the social structure and that the successful operation of this equipment would require a new type of social control which would be endemic to the nature of the equipment that was being placed in use." In this connection the word "endemic" apparently means a social control that naturally goes with or belongs to a machine civilization.

Present System Termed Obsolete

This would mean, naturally, that our present political system is obsolete, in the opinion of these Technocrats, and that all the controversy between the Republican tradition and the Democratic tradition is so much wind, since both traditions are doomed to be swept away with equal completeness. These Technocrats obviously are not looking to Communism as a solution. This first article of the series does not give their solution, but I suspect that it will turn out to be 'government by engineers' or something of the sort, a new and very American kind of Fascism.

"Vast technological forces have been steadily undermining, particularly in the last two decades, our present hap-hazard industrial system of uncontrolled production, competition and distribution." This means the end of the present "price-system," under which we live, which depends on a stable balance between production and consumption which obviously no longer exists.

The modern flour mill produces 30,000 barrels per day per man. In ancient Rome 7200 shoemakers would produce 7200 shoes in five and a half days. Today the same number of men in the same time can produce 595,000 pairs of shoes. A modern brick plant will produce 400,000 bricks a day. Today one man can produce 4000 tons of pig iron per year. And a photograph of a modern steel rolling mill in full operation will show a large plant without a human being on the floor. That is, the machine system not merely produces more than the world can consume but it progressively throws more and more people out of work.

Production Grows in Leaps

"It is after a sober scientific review of such facts that our engineers report that we are faced with the threat of national bankruptcy and perhaps general chaos within 18 months." There is no solution under a price system, since even present day Russia is no exception to that rule.

Production grows to fantastic proportions within a short period of time. Recent cigarette machinery has jumped cigarette making from 600 a minute to 2600 a minute. In the incandescent lamp industry today one man is doing in one hour as much as it took him 9000 hours to do in 1914. And it took only 37 men six weeks to build the machine!

One hundred men in modern plants, working steadily, could produce all the bricks this country needs!

For 7000 years there was no change in the method of doing work. Man was the only engine. But within the last hundred years we have multiplied the output rate of the human engine by 9,000,000. And of this, fully 8,766,000 units have come within the last 30 years.

Our financial structure is built on expensive machines in which vast sums are tied up but which are already out of date. "Some of our railroad bonds will not mature for decades and yet 95 per cent of the locomotives on our American railroads are obsolete. If industry, with what it knows today, should sell to the American people the best it can produce, most factories would shut down for a period of years. With what is known today about the application of technology, the adult population of this nation would have to work only four hours a day for four days a week to supply us with all our material needs."

The article ends on this note:

"The next two years will see offered a succession of remedial palliatives to be offered by our legislative bodies, our financial institutions and social organizations. That procession of the blind will include all the essence of futility in its many varied forms, from the mild buck-passing program of 'share the work' to the anticipated probable legislation of rent and private debt moratoriums, and to those twins of finality, the dole and complete inflation . . . These problems transcend all social theories and all partisan politics—even government. Technology has written 'mene, mene, takel upharsin' across the face of the price system."

Only One Ray of Hope Seen

In all these I see only one ray of hope—and that comes from the same issue in Mr. Smith's magazine. The article on Technocracy says that "in agriculture one man can do in one hour what it required 3000 hours for him to accomplish in 1840."

This obviously means very large scale mechanized farming operations. But in the back of the issue is an article titled, "Our Machine-Tilled Acres," the thesis of which is that big scale machine production farming is failing in Russia just as it failed when it was tried in America, and that in America most of the big farms are being broken up into small ones. This arises, Mr. Walter Liggett says, from the very nature of farming itself, which seems to show that the small farm, run by one family, is the most economic, efficient and productive unit of farming.

Here, where doctors disagree, it ill becomes an innocent bystander to rush in between the bricks. The Technocrats may be wrong about farming. It is not impossible that they may be wrong about other things. Prophecy—even statistical prophecy—is a risky business.

But I doubt if all this will affect the present campaign.

GENE TUNNEY WRITES—'A Man Must Fight'

$150 'HEAVEN' EMPTY ROOMS FOR SHINE

Bride Wouldn't Live in Costly Apartment, Says Builder; His Sister in Collapse

It was a ducky little four-room suite on the seventh floor of the Hotel Commander.

When John J. Shine was looking forward to his marriage in 1929 the bride-to-be characterized it a "seventh heaven" and Shine reserved it for their honeymoon at $150 a month.

Then were wedded and went to Europe on their honeymoon but when they returned Seventh Heaven remained unoccupied—at $150 a month. They went to live with Mrs. Shine's friends in Brighton.

So the well-to-do Cambridge contractor testified today in Middlesex court, contesting Mrs. Shine's divorce action now in its fourth day of hearing.

SISTER IN COLLAPSE

Shine himself placed no characterization upon the outcome of his plans. He merely told about the happening.

His sister, Mrs. Margaret Murphy of Cross st., Belmont, collapsed this morning on the witness stand and was carried from the courtroom she appeared to be ill.

Shine started building a fortune as a builder of buildings in 1924. He had previously been in real estate and before that had been a postoffice clerk. He met his wife five years before their marriage while she was living with Mrs. Catherine Dooley and Mrs. Nora E. Gennett, the sisters whom he blames for a large part of his domestic unhappiness.

Shine said there was no trouble on the honeymoon. Of the Commander suite, he said:

"My intended bride had characterized it as seventh heaven." SHE WOULDN'T LEAVE

Upon their return from Europe they went to live in Brighton Mrs. Gennett lived with them, he said, and her husband intermittently. Also Mrs. Gennett's maid. The Dooleys were in Florida but in April they returned and all lived together before the Gennetts went to Europe.

There were no quarrels about this arrangement, Shine said, but there were discussions about leaving and living by themselves. Mrs. Dooley told him once, he said, that he should have not reserved the right to charge the beneficiary of a $25,000 insurance policy made over to his wife. She told him all of My Dooley's property was in her name.

Shine told her his affairs were none of her business.

"From then on there was a decided change. I insisted on leaving, but my wife refused to go." DIDN'T HURL CORSETS

In September Mrs. Shine went on a trip with the Gennetts and Shine didn't know where she was, and when she returned there was another discussion and the Shines left to live in the pent-house apartment in Hotel Ambassador.

He said there were no quarrels and he denied he was ever drunk and ever pushed his wife out of bed.

Never he said, had he thrown his wife's corsets out a window because she didn't wear corsets and the first he ever heard of such a happening was when Mrs. Dooley gently related it in court.

He never hit Mrs. Shine or pushed her.

WILD PARTIES? NONE

"I thought too much of her" he added.

Asked about alleged wild parties he said,

"I've had some good times with friends but I wouldn't call them wild." His wife never complained about them, he said.

He had his last drink in February, he said, but he couldn't say how much whiskey he had drunk during his married life. He didn't care for it. He had ale and beer at home for his own and his wife's guests and his wife helped serve them.

Hesitates Over Offer for His First Real Bout Then Accepts Bid

SYNOPSIS

The author has sketched his boyhood days when the Hudson river was his swimmin' hole enhanced often with impromptu scraps until he left school at 13 to become a 25-a-week [illegible]. His first ring idol was Jack Goodman, New York's inland Red Side Right weight of two decades ago. Two Wilkes Ward and Green—help Gene in his lathe intimacy. Rozes of his first [illegible] K. of C. His ginger ale-and-sandwich fighting days.

CHAPTER IV

Willie Green, discovering a comeback not at all to his liking accepted a position as boxing and games instructor at the Greenwich Settlement House. Finding it impossible to get a workout from any of his pupils, he invited me to come down and box with him on the night he was free from classes—Saturday. I accepted his invitation and, at the beginning, boxed three rounds with him.

As the weeks passed we grad[illegible] increased our [illegible] up to [illegible] rounds. My steady Saturday night engagement for two years, with hardly an exception was boxing 10 rounds with Green in a little room in the Greenwich Settlement House. Green was a resourceful, skillful, hard-hitting lightweight. He had a splendid knack of delivering short hard blows. I learned during those two years how to roll and slide down leads counter with lefts or rights feint side step, avoid being hit unnecessarily and conserve my energy and time my attacks.

At the beginning the Villager used to say "Let's go down and see Willie Green make a punching bag of Gene Tunney." Much time passed and considerable patience was exercised during this period. The boys eventually were saying "Let's go down and see Willie Green and Gene Tunney box." This early boxing with this hard-hitting dangerous fellow made a careful boxer of me. This cautiousness always remained a part of my boxing technique.

LEARNS TO JOLT HIM

After starting boxing with Willie Green I became greatly interested in technique, and at the recreation center I used to watch the boys from the sidelines, studying their defenses and methods of delivery. I noticed when leading a left they could be lured into a counter. This always remained a part of my boxing technique.

LEARNS TO DUCK

I quickly studied each department and practiced what I thought helpful. At the end of two years I had improved so that when boxing with Willie Green he would never really say, "Don't cross your right so hard." Oftentimes in desperate efforts to hit me, he would fall flat on his face finding only the air where my head had been. Slowly eventually refused to put the gloves on with me at all.

However during the period of development Willie Green became very proud of his pupil. He thought that he ought to exhibit him. I had great confidence and respect for Green and believed he could do no wrong. As fighters went, Green was rather intelligent. This made his influence over me doubly strong.

OFFERED REAL FIGHT

I had secured quite a local reputation through the various amateurs I attended. The night the Eagers I attended. The night the Eagers I attended. The night the Eagers

IN THE BEAUTIFUL white and gold French room of the Women's Republican Club, Mrs. Paul D. Pointer of Winchester presented her debutante daughter, Miss Frances, to her social public yesterday afternoon . . .

The young bud and her mother received in the dark-panelled library against a background of flowers and greens . . . Frances wore a hyacinth-blue simple crepe costume with modish black hat and carried a cluster of purple orchids . . .

Mrs. Pointer looked very handsome in black velvet with a bunch of white orchids on the shoulder . . .

The luncheon was served for about 75 guests, mostly sister debs of Miss Pointer's season . . . assisting was Mrs. Richardson Harwood, who was Cynthia Pointer, sister of Miss Frances . . .

FRANCES POINIER

It was a perfect autumn day, clear and cool . . . stepping jauntily down Beacon st., we met one of the merriest of this year's bouquet, Rosamond Emerson with her friend Mary Brown, both in the sophisticated MINK coats . . .

Natty Tweed Suits

ANNE GIBSON IN BROWN cloak and chapeau, trimmed with the flattering mink, came along with Madelaine Erhard in a stylish fall ensemble . . . the natty suits in tweeds and wools were most attractive . . .

Elizabeth Mixter affected the mysterious leopard in a swagger coat . . . she is very pretty, like her mother.

In the popular green hat with light fur coat, Frances Seaver breezed along with the winter winds . . . it was blowy as we came down over the hill with gusts of autumn leaves swirling over the Common . . .

Pretty Frances Irving of Needham appeared in a becoming large fox collar on her winter coat and smart black sailor . . .

From Concord came Isabella Eaton accompanied by her mother . . . she wore a black gown with white bodice with smart black coat and hat . . . tall and slender, she is very attractive in a sweet-girl-graduate sort of way . . .

Attractive in Bright Green

PEPPY JANE BOGARDUS, who stepped out at the Algonquin Club earlier in the week, came with a group which included Elizabeth Hollis, dark and pretty, Polly Plimpton, Margery Estabrook and Anna De Cormis . . . who was most attractive in bright green . . .

Quite the most beautifully gowned among those we met was Priscilla Phelan whose sky-blue wool dress was set off by a cluster of lavender orchids . . . Anne Torbert tripped along soon after with

Priscilla Hoyt, Titian-haired daughter of the Dr. and Mrs. C. Wentworth Hoyts of Hingham . . . and Tall and blonde Leonora Kimball, whom we have seen simply everywhere this season . . .

Two lovely girls came together, Betty Reece and Bettina Eshelman of Milton . . .

In red and snuggled up in furs, Rose Stearn graced the occasion . . . she is receiving much attention from the stags we hear . . .

Closes Bar Harbor Estate

MRS. J. D. BALDRIDGE has been stopping at the Copley-Plaza during horse show week . . . Mrs. Erwin Martin of New York has been her guest . . . Mrs. Baldridge has returned to her beautiful estate at Bar Harbor to close it and will open her town house on Commonwealth ave. . . which was Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams' residence before he moved to Washington . . . in the near future . . .

We saw Jack Batchelor, our own portrait painter, at the Fullers' tea last week . . . he looks as handsome as ever on his return from abroad . . .

Mrs. Curtis Guild, very handsome indeed in midnight blue street costume and her beautiful sables, was also among those who greeted the fair daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller at the most successful tea of the season . . .

The daily puzzle today is . . . where has the beautiful dark-eyed Mrs. Lawrence Green gone on her mysterious trip away . . . ? Her brilliant lawyer husband is keeping the home fires burning in Dedham with their six lovely children . . . while "Mummy" is abroad. The tabbies are commencing to stretch themselves . . .

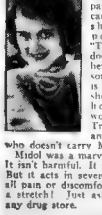
How Do Women in the Movies Manage?



filming a picture means weeks of work without a pause. The star can't stop because she is "indisposed!" The "Time of Month" does not excuse her. If you know some woman who is in the pictures, she will tell you how Hollywood women manage. Try to find even an "extra" girl who doesn't carry Midol with her! Midol was a marvelous discovery. It isn't harmful. It isn't a narcotic But it acts in seven minutes—ends all pain or discomfort for hours at a stretch! Just ask for Midol at any drug store.

The debutante groups are cliquey this winter . . . we might we suggest that they have branches of the Junior League and Vincent Club to solve geographical problems . . . the Fisher Hill branch to identify those who live west of Boston . . . the Swampscott contingent to keep them from becoming mixed with the North Shore members, etc. . . .

There was nothing [illegible] gentleman to do but [illegible] there.

But there was no subway th[illegible] We marched to the Third ave. el[illegible] rated road and went to City Hall. Then over the Brooklyn Bridge. It was midnight, and that was an [illegible] seemly hour for me then. I was fascinated by her knowledge of the tangle of Brooklyn streets when we reached that suburb of New York. It seemed to me [illegible] that we rode and rode. My liking of her waned with every [illegible] of the car, every bump and [illegible] and turn of that [illegible] vehicle; yet I kept up a polite conversation and feigned a zest I was far from feeling.

Into the country we finally fared. I heard streets called out [illegible] which I had never known [illegible] were closed, shutters were drawn. Decent folk were long since in bed. New York, behind me was asleep. "Brooklyn is New Yorks bedroom," I recalled that a wit of the time had said and here was I, wide awake in it. Then I think we both must have dozed off a bit. Awakened by a sudden lurch, we heard the conductor cry, "Eath Beach". The next would be our stop. How good to know that!

Loath to Part

At the door of her house I tried to say good-bye as hastily as possible. But the young lady seemed loath to part.

"Won't you come in?" she invited, much like the young ladies in the advertisements of today.

It was cold. I was chilled through, but I knew enough not to go within. I thought of the long, dreary trip home. Did women have no sense? "No," I said, firmly, without an added "thanks."

But as I turned down the path she called to me I went back. "We're moving to Brooklyn next week," she said. "I hope you'll come and see me there. Greene avenue." Weakly I said yes, that I would be pleased.

Haunted by the girl's prettiness I wrote to her, reminding her of her promise to let me come and see her in Brooklyn. She answered [illegible] I found a room [illegible] with people unknown to me. Clarence Brown, who has directed many of the screen's most dramatic stars, including Greta Garbo, Joan Crawford, Norma Shearer, Marie Dressler, Ramon Novarro and Lionel Barrymore, has selected Miss MacKellar for the dramatic role that Louise Dresser created in "A Free Soul." She will appear opposite Clark Gable.

Miss MacKellar's performance in the dramatic role that Louise Dresser created in "A Free Soul" has caused Brown to select her for the leading feminine role opposite Clark Gable in "Possessed," which he will direct. Joan Crawford is the star.

Miss MacKellar has been in pictures before, but she has been playing bits. She was in "Washington Merry-Go-Round," which was one of the first talkies, and also in "Zoo in Budapest," "Strange Cargo" and "Wagon Tracks." She was under contract to Famous Players-Lasky, so it is not surprising that he and Mr. Lasky have joined forces.

AROUND THE THEATERS WITH Nicholas Young

Howard Marsh, Featured With Grace Moore in "Dubarry," Has Opposition Interest

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

By one of the freaks of booking—not an unusual thing in the theater—Howard Marsh will move into town next Monday and set himself up as opposition to himself, or, at least, in stern competition with his own interests, Mr. Marsh, you should know is one of the principal singers in the operetta, "The Dubarry," which will have its local premiere at the Shubert. As is rather generally known, Mr. Marsh has a substantial financial interest in the Gilbert and Sullivan revivals, now at the Hollis. It was expected, because of this, that he would continue with that organization.

* * *

It was Mr. Marsh who sang all the tenor roles in last season's Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, and this close association with Milton Aborn seemed something like a guarantee that he would remain with the company. But tenors, we are told, are not free from egotistical temptation, and when the opportunity to appear with Grace Moore in "The Dubarry" presented itself there was nothing to do but to yield. It was hardly to be expected, however, that he would so soon find himself in direct rivalry with one of his own favorite enterprises. You may be sure, for once, at least, in the profession, that Howard Marsh here is an actor who sincerely hopes the opposition will do well and prosper.

RATTLING THE SKELETON

When Victor von Kemb, manager of "Show Boat" was a young man in his native land of Hungary, he specialized in languages. He first real job as a linguist was to act as secretary and interpreter to the commissioner of the Austro-Hungarian exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair in 1893. Seven languages tripped lightly from the Kirsly tongue.

Cast Coming by Boat

For the first time, as far as the records reveal, a theatrical company will make a journey from New York to Boston by water. By special arrangements with the Eastern Steamship Co. the entire cast and production of "Gay Divorce," which opens Monday of the Wilbur will make the sailten seas for a single night on the good ship, Saint John. An entire cabin has been reserved for the members of the cast authors composers, musicians and crew, and it is the idea an added bit of novelty the producers of the piece have persuaded the steamship management to forego this usual ship concert and substitute instead the company's first public rehearsal. Immediately following the two weeks' try-out in Boston, Gay Divorce" will have its Broadway premiere at the Ethel Barrymore Theater during the week of November 21.

* * *

ANOTHER REBEL INVADES—Elsie Chisholm, who writes verse for the newspapers in the interest of Fred Astaire and "Gay Divorce," is a Mississippian born and bred and proud of it despite the fact that a great many of her ancestors fought against it. Her grandfather was a major in Jeb Stuart's Confederate cavalry corps.

Girl Turns Author

No event press agent of the Hollywood type, and in this case we must include the publicists of exclusive talents in the dramatic world, is of muffs and blurbs about a time. From Broadway comes the news that Helen Hoerle, perhaps the most noted of our present day feminists in the field of promotion, has written a book that is going to be published in the near future and it is now in the book shops. "The Girl and the Future" is the title of Miss Hoerle's story and you may be quite sure that a foreword by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will not be at all irrelevant to its sale. Miss Hoerle is one of the most active of the ladies' publicists, she also is a vice president of the press agents' own organization known as TPROA. If you want to know what Helen Hoerle thinks about girls and their future you will find out you do not have to buy the book.

Guy Maier Program in Jordan Hall Saturday

Guy Maier gives the second of his musical journeys in Jordan Hall Saturday morning, Nov. 12 under the auspices of the Disabled Veterans hospital service. Arthur Fiedler and his Boston Sinfonietta in a program of Spanish music will assist. Pedro Sanz will show the life of Chopin in Majorca.

Samuel Gardiner at Jordan Hall

Samuel Gardiner violinist from New York, who played at Jordan Hall last night, is first of all a musician. Therefore he set his program A Handel sonata in D, a solo by Ary Sinsoin, a Brahms sonata in D minor and so forth. An exceedingly intelligent and musicianly performance. One of the latter was Gardiner's own C major prelude a virtuoso piece of the best type, for it made musical sense.

As a person, primarily Gardiner played the program. Such technical aspects of his art were taken for granted never flaunted. Gardiner could play with speed and ease, he could play extraordinarily in tune, he could command a fine and colorful tone, but he unavariedly placed his command of how and when at the service of the composer.

The result was a straightforward musical performance such as happens all too rarely in the age of the virtuoso and such as one remembers all the more gratefully. Assisted by the splendid pianism and musicianship of Felix Fox, Gardiner gave a well rounded finely modified restrained yet impassioned performance of the Brahms sonata.

FAR WEST FIGHT CLOSE AS POLL NEARS CLOSE

By COLE P. MORGAN
Universal Service Correspondent

Washington, Nov. 3 They are fighting in the far west and fighting hard, the Republicans to overthrow the early Democratic advantage and the Democrats to maintain that advantage and to make the Roosevelt victory all the more complete.

Wyoming has reached the point where it is anybody's state With 3596 postcard ballots from that state recorded in the nationwide presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning evening and Sunday papers in the United States, there is a difference of only 16 between Hoover and Roosevelt.

It is in Roosevelt's favor for the last two weeks Hoover has cut into Roosevelt's Wyoming lead to where it has now almost reached the vanishing point

Montana is another far western state that had become precariously close. With 4155 ballots tabulated Roosevelt holds the state's majority of only 136 He has increased it the last week by 1000 of the last four weeks.

Colorado is also uncertain Hoover has a majority of 1,000 in that state, with 7095 ballots counted. In the last four weeks Hoover has had the best end of the returns three times and Roosevelt once.

Idaho with the week split its vote exactly even, but last week and the week before Roosevelt had a good edge on the returns. He still has a majority of 288 out of 2586 ballots, which gives him a comfortable margin of safety

Utah the last two weeks has given Hoover small leads although he is far behind in the total poll count from the Mormon state Roosevelt having a 58 majority over Hoover.

A week ago it looked as if Hoover had taken a spurt to overcome Roosevelt's substantial Oregon lead, but this week Roosevelt came back with an approximately three to two return to raise his majority to 861 out of 8000.

In Washington State Hoover this week held Roosevelt to a one majority out of 107 new votes. The state is safely in the Roosevelt side with a 2191 majority out of 9071 ballots.

Arizona today is dead even The vote exactly even That state, however, still shows a 677 Roosevelt majority on 1905 ballots.

New Mexico and Nevada, likewise, are staying firmly on the Roosevelt side.

The territory east of the Missouri river, where three fourths of the state's electoral votes are found, promises to give Governor Roosevelt a majority around 25000 West of the river the vote will split nearly even. On this line South Dakota will return a Democratic state majority of around 32,500.

How Nominees Stand In Nation-Wide Poll

Washington, Nov. 3—The tabulation that follows shows the total vote thus far recorded for President Hoover and Gov. Roosevelt in the nationwide Presidential poll of the Boston Evening American in co-operation with all other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

It also shows the majority each candidate has in each State in which he is leading.

In addition, it gives the gain of each candidate on the latest returns received from each State, as compared with the last preceding report from the State. These State reports are usually a week apart.

The first feature of this table shows the net gain of each candidate in each State where he has improved his position, as compared with the last preceding report from that State.

BIG BLUFFING BOUT IS SHORTLY TO BEGIN

By B. C. FORBES

WALK UP, Ladies and Gentlemen, the curtain is about to be drawn on the greatest international bluffing contest ever staged.

You will see all the leading nations of Europe in action. They will put on bouts among themselves; but, Ladies and Gentlemen, the star act will be Europe versus the United States.

Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England you may remember him as the celebrated Prof Skinner's has already been completely imported for the forthcoming exhibition. By smashing to atoms his life-long silence it is therefore as predicted as that of the Sphinx He opened his zealously guarded mouth to proclaim to the world—and especially to the United States —that Great Britain is in a dandy fix and you may take it from him it. Others may profess to see daylight at the end of the tunnel, the "professor" tells you that he doubts whether daylight will ever again be reached by Britain

STERLING AND STRATEGY

Ladies and Gentlemen to be prepared to witness exciting thrilling alarming acts by John Bull acts as dramatic as Uncle Sam's Uncle Shylock to Europe and every limb it will be demonstrated is a Dynamo. Most of he interest upon even a modest portion of his war debt pound of flesh, either the greatest pillar of the British Empire will totter and fall—or Uncle Shylock will be made to face even worse than his classic namesake.

If strategy demand it expect, Ladies and Gentlemen to witness within the hour one of the most perilous plunge in all history. All the scenery has already been set for this thrilling drama. It is designed to frighten Uncle Shylock as he has never been frightened before. He could be on the beginning of all his foreign markets by that "Empire on which the sun never sets."

The American Goliath, Gold, is to be mostly wounded by the British Empire and may, perhaps, unless the Goliath agrees to make sacrifices sufficient to mollify the desperate David.

TRYING TO BEAT U. S.

Supporting the "Empire on which the sun never sets" will be such powerful seconds as France and Germany

France as you well know Ladies and Gentlemen, has been itching to get the better of Uncle Shylock. She has made no secret for years that she has no intention of lying even a quarter of a pound of flesh that she means to coerce Uncle Shylock into surrendering the claim stipulated in the bond.

Germany, as you have heard you Ladies and Gentlemen, that she is determined by hook or by crook, to get from under the obligations forced on her.

You already had a curtain raiser, Ladies and Gentlemen, at Lausanne. There you saw the ratcliff "A Gentleme Agreement," an agreement by interested European nations to deal with, very gently with the spoiled child of Uncle Sam.

SHOW FOLLOWS ELECTION

The Big Show is about to commence after Uncle Samuel has emerged from his bothersome presidential exertions.

Fair words blandishments doubtless will first be essayed Uncle Samuel will be assured that he never, never was regarded as an Uncle Shylock but tenderly as an international Santa Claus. That he will be asked to play a paternal role, why not on this momentous of all occasions live up to such a wonderful reputation?

But Ladies and Gentlemen, should flattery fail to induce Santa Claus to make gifts amounting to billions then will come threatenings of the "Third Degree," involving the destruction of Uncle Sam's fields world markets by the agile David Sterling but stressed by a network of tariff walls, quotas and related to hobble Uncle Sam fatally.

Live News of Leaders Today in Wall Street

NEW all-time low prices for wheat in the Chicago pits were the principal retarding factor with which the stock market had to contend during a few hours' struggled to behave well. One was spectacular. This was Honorable John Bull, which, after showing sky-ketted more than $13 a share

Improvement Kept Up by Bank Clearings

Dun's Review reported that bank clearings at all leading cities in the United States maintained their recent improvement this week Clearings totaled $4,121,286,000, a decrease of 34.3 per cent compared with a year ago This reduction was mainly at New York City, where clearings totaled $2,732,681,000 a loss of 38 per cent Chicago and Detroit showed sizable declines compared with 1931 but improvement was shown in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and most of the Southern cities.

Increase in Steel Tonnage Expected

Preliminary forecasts indicate a small increase will be reported next week in the United States Steel unfilled tonnage statement.

Trade Opinion on Paramount

Motion picture circles profess to be pleased with the latest executive shifts in the Paramount-Publix situation. It is claimed that the decentralization of the Paramount theater circuit, whereby management is restricted to local interests, will bring about a new satisfaction from the profit standpoint than the former centralization of control in New York.

This New York control cost the company an overhead estimated at upwards of $5,000,000 annually. The bankers for the company remain silent regarding its prospects.

Electric Power Output Unchanged

Speculative sentiment toward utility issues underwent no outstanding change on a report for the weekly report of electric power output yesterday. As a matter of fact that the showing was rather difficult to analyze particularly for evidence of sustained improvement in the industrial situation. Certainly Drop reported in last week's power consumption was unchanged from the preceding week, amounting to 72 per cent compared with 1931.

Eastman Kodak at Support Level

Selling below 50, Eastman Kodak is approximately around the support level there are indications. Developed on several occasions since the dividend was reduced to a $3 annual basis late in September. Yield at current market of close to 6 per cent is thought to amply appraise prospects for maintenance of the revised payment well into the first half of next year. Directors of the company meet next Monday to declare the dividend usually paid January 1.

Chemicals Lack Seasonal Snap

Market asap usually displayed by chemical and alcohol shares at this season of the year is lacking.

STOCK MARKET LETTER STRESS ON ELECTION

By FRANK H. MELOON

Nearly every writer of a stock market letter for big Boston and New York investment banking houses is laying stress on the impending election as a factor in Wall and State Streets. One remarks that little is talked of but the goodness of the candidates, and the probable conduct of affairs from the national capital Another adds changing note when he says

"There will be a month or so at least (after election) when general business and economic factors can have some influence."

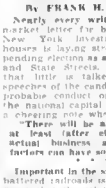
Important in the situation for the battered railroads is the announcement that the joint committee of railroad and banking executives recently organized to consider possible methods of relief has high hopes for an agreement by mid-December To Dr W. J. Cunningham, professor of transportation at Harvard, will fall the important task of harmonizing the conflicting findings of both divisions of the committee.



Prof. W. J. Cunningham

A note of cheer and a thrill of pride was well followed today by the United States, third in the list of largest gold producers is increasing output faster than any other country August production of $4,081,470 represents an increase of 24 per cent in January as compared with 123 per cent for Canada and only 4.5 per cent for South Africa, by far the largest producer.

There has been a healthy increase in American gold production from copper ores, following decline in output of copper but from placer deposits where the increase in production of dust gold brillion

A new high record output of about $475,410,000 is indicated for the world this year, compared with $410,056,450 in 1931 For 1922 the figure was $319,248,150.

Speaking of gold, a new development is found south of the Rio Grande. It is reported that, as a means of obtaining at a minimum cost sufficient gold for redemption of its silver dollars, the Mexican government has arranged with the Mexican Metal Guaranteed for Bank of Mexico notes The Mexican government proposes to capitalize the two important and gold and silver fields in the State of Oaxaca.

'GL" and "WX" Radio Distribution Talk

Reports were current in financial circles that General Electric and Westinghouse Electric may shortly put forth proposals for dissolving of their holdings of Radio Corp. that would solve the government's anti-trust charge against them. One of the steps said to be under discussion suggested distribution of the Radio stock owned by both companies to their stockholders. Such a distribution would take the form of a "melon" of almost 3 shares of Radio Corp. for each share General Electric and approximately 11 share for each of Westinghouse now outstanding, at current market and on these terms the distribution figures to be worth about $18 per share for Gen'l Electric holders and about $7 10 a share for Westinghouse

Small stockholders have been overlooking light short commitments in American Telephone on so-called unfavorable reports but financial officials in the management are more optimistic on the outlook than in the past 18 months.

Shoes, Piece Goods Sales in the Lead

Cash sales for October amounting to $623 018 are reported by C D Berry, president of National Retail Dry Goods Association These figures, covering the unit of operations under the new management plan, show

"Shoes and piece goods are producing the largest volume in the current reckoning. For the last 30 days that the catalogue has been in circulation we have sold approximately 6,000 pairs of shoes, or an average of 4000 pairs a day, while in the same period we have sold 872,000 yards of cotton piece goods, silk and woolens, or an average of 14,000 yards a day.

"Staple departments such as these as the hardware in the mail order business and are consistently the most profitable."

Shipping Trade Dull

STATE ST.

Hears:

That the psychology of fear speech had its effect and share prices received a rebuff in their attempts to regain additional ground lost since September. Whether the general market factor has been irreparably damaged is not known, and it seems wise to wait and see if the lows of October 10th will remain inviolate. Stops just under these levels were recommended and they should remain in force.

Market Movement

The charities see everything points to a much lower level of prices. Undoubtedly they have much in their favor. There is one important rule, however, that has yet to be brought into play. It is theory of the dual averages which must confirm before any definite move can be anticipated.

According to the teachings of the original commentations on the Dow Jones averages, the two important averages the rails and the industrials, must follow in various line before important declines are forecast. This condition does not yet exist

* * *

Measured by closing prices the important points to watch are at 23.85 on the rails and 58.47 on the industrials. A break through by one index, not followed by the other within a reasonably short time, however, is ordinarily the sign of a false down move to facilitate accumulation or short covering

This and That

State St. was none too pleased with the arguments presented to the public in favor of one presidential candidate. While it might lean toward the party now in power, it does not condone acts that retard universally any form of psychology and on its business.

Something in holding the ale in gether on the face of bearish reports The group acts relatively better than the rest of the list despite price recessions Dividends and fear of production difficulties this winter It may be the oils are definitely around that corner.

The tobaccos were again under pressure today, but both on a comparison on the type An interesting point is that they have not stepped through the lows of the year. Should they move on great double bottom has been made Leaflets in particular appears to be moulding a bottom

* * *

Some of the specialties have been comparatively absent up to the present. Rolls on these issues have been the rule and should continue to temporarily retarding aggressive attempts to move speculation in any fast extent. Specialties are a phenomenon, means experience the most profitable investment during the year and the opportunity to obtain the current cash prospects.

The trend of business in the hotel of the American Hotels Corporation has been upward since July which marked the low point of the current depression, according to a statement by General Manager Leonard, president of the company which operates forty hotels in the northeastern part of the United States.

Almost without exception, said General Kincaid, the various local managers report a decided increase in the number of commercial travelers and sample room men on the road.

The 40 hotels of the American Hotels group in July showed a reduction of 39.5 per cent in the number of room revenue as compared with July of 1931 Since that time the monthly comparative figures have shown a steady improvement and for October the decrease as compared with the same month last year, was 29.4 per cent.

SPECTATOR

Says:

General Motors threw Wall Street a life-line by declaring the regular dividend. Whether the enfeebled market has strength enough to grab it will be determined today. Perhaps a rally will follow, but from the stock buyer's standpoint the market in the last two days has shown that it would rather go down than up. Until this attitude changes the sidelines continue the only place.

Bear Gossip

Interests who are looking for a big market after election continue confident. They are terming yesterday's break the 'bears' last chance" It did seem curious that the selling came out of a clear sky, with the initial heavy offerings coming from a floor trader who has been active on the bear side for quite a while

* * *

While there evidently is some liquidation to bring about the last-hour volume, inquiry among a number of brokerage houses failed to indicate any important selling . . In fact, a few stated that amateur traders had become bolder and were going short .

* * *

It may well be that there is a drive against a few tired out pools who have been downtrodden by the market's inability to go up and are trying to get rid of stock . . A number of active stocks are said to be in that state long interest, which is a potential source of liquidation . . The banks, 'tis reported are more inclined to buy on weakness

Here and There

Standard Oil of New Jersey has the distinction of being one of the few stocks to close up on the day. Was one of the few to show any encouraging attitude on crude oil prices . . Chart readers can now see the possibility of a decline to around the 22 level on the industrial averages.

No matter what the market does, business continues to give encouragement with power and steel output up for the week . . Pennsylvania road showed a relatively small decline in traffic last week, which suggests that Saturday's loadings report may show a gain as was earlier indicated . . Stocks held well while wheat went down Now that corn has declined and more rotten e down goes the market

Hudson and Essex Sales Are Larger

Detroit Nov 3 Sales of Hudson and Essex cars in October, 1932, exceeds those of October, 1931, by 135 cars While the gain is small it contrasts with a loss in sales generally sustained by the industry for that month

A survey of 222 counties, in which more than 100 cars have been sold during the first nine months of the year, indicates that in 70 of these counties Hudson-Essex is first in new registrations for September.

PRICE CHANGES PROVE NARROW FOR LEADERS

New York, Nov. 3—Price changes for most leaders proved narrow in afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange today. The turnover was small and mostly at a dull pace.

Occasional rallies appeared, but were followed by resumption of a creeping downward drift, bringing scattering setbacks of a point or so, with a few issues off 2 to 3 points.

WHEAT IS A FACTOR

New all-time lows set in the wheat pits today were a retarding factor. In afternoon transactions General Motors was mostly up a minor fraction, in response to its regular dividend. A few issues ag2ard ½ to 1½ points in the morning, including American Telephone, American Can, Consolidated Gas, York Central, Case, American Tobacco "B" and Allied Chemical, but these losses were soon retained in whole or in part, for a time. W. T. Grant was moderately heavy, losing about 1¼. U. S. Steel was about steady.

Gold mining issues worked higher. Homestake, normally a wide mover, put up about 9, while Alaska Juneau was up a fraction.

Reaction of the previous session had reduced the general price level to the area at which it met support in the reaction of early October, and traders were inclined to keep to the sidelines until it became clear whether those resistance levels would be broken.

Brokers said that much of the selling in yesterday's late slump had apparently been for short account, but that discouraged liquidation had also been in evidence.

New developments of a character to influence the list were meagre. Estimates were being made in brokerage quarters that the weekly freight car loadings report would show the sharpest seasonal drop of the year, the Labor Day holiday, indicating rather clearly that the seasonal peak had been passed.

IRVIN SEES CHEER

Nevertheless, there were indications that the recent gains in general business were being fairly well maintained. William A. Irvin, president of U. S. Steel, said during a pleasant inspection trip that business activity was showing real improvement. Dun's tabulation indicated that the volume of bank clearings was being well maintained.

Firming of the gold mining issues was presumably a reflection of the renewed slump in commodity prices. As other commodities decline, the value of gold increases. Gold mining stocks had quite a flurry while commodity prices were declining earlier in the year, but had been rather neglected during the recent stiffening of the price level.

The Street believes the decline in prices Wednesday was largely of professional origin, inasmuch as public participation in the market recently has been negligible. The floor selling brought some liquidating by those hesitant about holding stocks over the election.

Loew's, Inc., has been under pressure, liquidation for the most part, which is rather surprising to the Street since the company will report 74.75 to 75 a share for year ended August 31. Prospects for lower earnings this year are probably responsible for the selling, although the quality of the company's films is generally high in the trade.

There has been some selling of our securities from foreign sources the last 24 hours. Volume of such selling has not been large, but it is the first reported since the buying wave from European sources made itself felt some months ago.

R. F. C. After More Loans to Feeders

Washington, Nov. 3—Reconstruction Finance Corp. is disappointed over lack of applications for feeder loans, a function it had hoped would be the most helpful to the farmer at this time.

There is a large corn crop, Director Cowles said, and prices are low, and for cattle and sheep farmers it would seem greatly to their advantage to borrow from the Reconstruction Finance Corp. for feeding purposes. It was pointed out the e is a large supply of funds to supply feeder loans and the officials of the corporation are anxious for this type of business. These loans would be made at 7 per cent, including inspection charges, and are considered by officials the cheapest money ever available to feeders. The loans would run three to 11 months, with the average between five and six months.

Closing Is Steady in London Market

London, Nov. 3—Stocks closed steady here today. Transatlantics were inclined to rally. The closing was firm in Paris. In Berlin prices dropped one to three points due to the Berlin street car strike and internal political developments. Closing was a shade better but business was stagnant.

Bar Silver Unchanged

New York, Nov. 3 (AP)—Bar silver quiet, unchanged at 27.

COOK-COOS

By TED COOK

Everything's going to be all right! An ad in the Nation says: The World is waiting for the Bonus. But why wait? Hundreds of nightly entertained members of Congress, unprecedented club rush for the impeccably marooned, are NOW spreading the sunshine of genuine fellowship and cheer to readers throughout the world. Send applause for debate, 311 East 11th street, New York.

This is Weatherbee J. Grunion, who recently deserted his fabulously wealthy wife to run off with the second floor maid. After a brief honeymoon in Bermuda he will return in order to bring suit against his wife for permitting his affections to be alienated by a younger, but practically penniless, woman.

HUMAN NATURE STUDY

Scene: St. Johns Church.

The club women went to Lacon Saturday to meet at the home of Mrs. Norton. Mrs. Norton was hostess and entertainer as well, and well she filled the bill. Her subject was "Lakes of the United States" As she told some instances surrounding each lake, great or small, a song was rendered by a member to emphasize, sung by a sweet singer, Mrs. Florence Grieves, accompanied on the piano by a charming lady, Mrs. Sylvia Shores-Riel. The first was the "Stein Song," made popular by Rudy Vallee, then "Suzanna" and on down the line, a Creole song bringing to our minds' eye a dusky maiden, and closing the number by a breath holding poem by Edgar Guest, "The Moon and the Lake." We listeners raise our hands and voice in thanking Mrs. Norton for the great pleasure she conferred on the members.

FRISBY FLAYS PLOTTERS

WASHINGTON—Placing patriotism before partisan politics, Congressman Frisby today announced that he had discovered another deep-laid plot to restrain voters from registering their true choice on next Tuesday. His official statement, illustrated with the above cut, was then handed out to a man named Lewitz:

"What is to prevent unethical capitalists from freely distributing these jackets? Which, when slipped on, buttoned down the front, with the arms folded across the back, and buckled, would make it practically impossible for millions of well wishers to write my name on the ballot. It is my belief, gentlemen, which I state with all the power at my command, that our nation cannot exist half slave and half free!

"Yours for a five-cent cigar,
"Horace Walpole Frisby."

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By Louis Sobol

Broadway Merry-Go-Round!

Hold on to your seats, folks, we're starting. You probably don't know that woman over there—she looks haggard and tired and her clothes are shabby. Once the world looked pretty grand for her—when her husband, Johnny Buff, was flyweight champion of the world. Today, with three children to feed and rent to pay, she's destitute and her one remaining asset is the Tex Rickard championship gold belt, studded with diamonds, which Johnny acquired when they placed the flyweight crown on his head. She wants to sell that belt—the few dollars she gets will save her kids and herself from starvation. That's one sign of these times and another is a letter I've received from a girl, who signs herself "Rose Duffy," who writes: "You've gotten a job for an ex-convict. You've procured a home for a poor waif and hotel rooms for several impecunious show girls. Do something for me.

I am five feet seven and a half inches tall, weigh 115 pounds, fair of complexion, blonde curly hair, dimples, blue eyes and good natured. There must be some man—a lonely man—even a lonely old man who would like to marry a girl like me and provide me with a good home in return for the companionship—perhaps, even love, I might give him. I am 25 years old and I find it impossible to get a job. It seems to me it would be far simpler and more satisfactory to get married.

A tall, blond lad whose clothes don't fit him any too well and who looks like he's come fresh from the cornfields is Howard Hughes, who's popping in and out of night clubs these days. Youthful millionaire, his one ambition is to turn out movie superspecials in which he will talk about, and he's succeeded fairly well to date, although he spends so much money on every production it's difficult to tell whether he's made any for himself. But I know a flock of little chorus girls are going to get the break of their lives, for Hughes is quietly taking in with a fresh from the cornfields is Howard Hughes, who's popping in and out of night clubs these days. Youthful millionaire, his one ambition is to turn out movie superspecials in which he will talk about, and he's succeeded fairly well to date, although he spends so much money on every production it's difficult to tell whether he's made any for himself. But I know a flock of little chorus girls are going to get the break of their lives, for Hughes is quietly taking in with a musical shows and the night club shows and making selections for his next big picture. Not so young nor as wealthy—in fact, she's been having a hard time making ends meet—is Helen Fitzgerald, one time a Weber & Fields favorite, and later a leading woman with Eddie Cantor, and, if I'm not mistaken, with Ed Wynn, too. At any rate, she's dropped out of the theatrical picture and was finally forced to sell some sort of cold cream to pay for rent and coffee and cakes money. She's back in the swim again as a comedienne in "Americana."

A fellow in this town whom I like a great deal, chiefly because he always seems so gay and carefree and normally has a new gag to spring on me is Pitsie Katz. For years he was a lobbe comic, working in the films and on the stage, and he was a good comic, they tell me, but evidently not good comics think about their future occasionally, and Pitsie decided that surely was a fruitless field, so he went around talking to himself, but chiefly keeping an eye open and one day, according to the story, walking down Broadway, he noticed that, no matter how hard or how good those waiters in coffee shops were always being washed. So he organized a crew of window-washers and now he devotes his comedy talents chiefly in securing new contracts.

A likeable fellow, this Paul Muni. On the screen, a blustering, swaggering braggart—on the stage, genial, self-confident hero. But in private life, I've never encountered a more timorous, self-effacing chap and it's amusing to watch the red creep up the back of his neck whenever he's in a public place and asked to take a bow. Incidentally, because the last time he was forced to stand up and bow, it was N. T. G. who called upon him, this might be the time to advise you that despite all contrary reports, the papers were signed, sealed and exchanged Saturday morning for the Gallagher night club at 49th and Broadway which is to run opposition to the Hollywood Restaurant. Jack O. goes into the new place, as already reported, but I wonder whether he won't find the same sort of pang in the event the new nite-spot wins the favor of the public a way the famous Hollywood which he helped to make so successful. And there go Tommy Guinan and the vivacious Sally O'Neil. Someone started the report that the two had slipped off quietly to Jersey City and become man and wife—an interesting report but wholly untrue. Nevertheless, it is true that a Guinan romance has developed between the former cinema star and the popular Broadwayite and, dropping into Lee Chumley's Monday night for a few minutes participation in the Halloween festivities, I was present long enough to hear Tommy murmur, "You know, Sally, I was thinking maybe you ought to marry me next week."

Amusing sight Sunday afternoon. A luxurious black Rolls-Royce bearing, instead of the familiar "Repeal the Eighteenth Amendment," this metal placard: "Vote for the Straight Socialist Ticket." Now, ex-Ambassador Richard Washburn Child doesn't belong to this Broadway merry-go-round, although some of the yarns he's written have been coloured by many of us who ride on this carrousel, so it may interest you to learn that he became the pappy of an eight-pound gal yesterday morning. And you don't see Jimmy Walker around much these days, which is one of the reason may be that the lad's busy, with the assistance of a well-known newspaperman, turning out a biographical account of his colorful career for serialization in one of the better mags. If you'll take a quick look, now, you'll spot one of our better known citizens—Tony Sarg, the drawing fellow, famous for his marionettes. The chap's turning restaurateur—opening a place, I hear, he's going to call Bohemia, and it'll be full of odd little tricks and decorations all from his own workshop. He's planning some sort of show in which there will be impersonations of Marlene Dietrich, Helen Morgan, Ed Wynn, Rudy Vallee and a few of the columnists—and the only reason he hasn't opened up is that he wants to be sure the believes, foolishly enough, that there's a pile of money in the restaurant business, even when it's operated by an artist.

Those two funny fellows, Weber and Fields—if you've seen them in any of their famous funny pieces, but now, if reports are true, I may have the opportunity, for I hear that the two comedians are assembling a production featuring a group of old-time stars in a revival of one of the early Weber and Field successes. I don't know much about this Barre Hill, the opera singer, but he tells one yarn I like of a prima donna who, having returned from one of the major opera companies, was offered a fourthirty date to tour "four-a-day" and accepted. The first theater at which she appeared had a trained seal act following her, but to save time the seals were put in the wings while she was on. They flapped and cheered the wrong times and the funny, raucous noises they made almost drove the lady hysterical. So she complained to the theater manager, who regretted he couldn't do anything about it. The next day the angry singer came to the theater early, carting a basket of fish. She fed them to the seals—pound after pound of fish. That afternoon when the seals came on stage, the trainer met an indifferent group—he tossed them fish after fish—but they merely turned up their snouts and rejected them. They just lay down and played dead in the wild fish mania. The seal act was cancelled and the opera singer had easy sailing the remainder of the week.

If You Really Want Repeal and Good Service, Elect These Men

Massachusetts has its chance next Tuesday to get results in the long fight for repeal of prohibition, with all its abuses, crime, and debauchery of the law, by electing Democratic candidates for Congress. The Democratic platform calls for outright repeal—with no quibbling or juggling of words in an effort to deceive the voters. Each of the party candidates is pledged to the platform and to immediate repeal. Election of these men means action. The Republican platform is an out and out straddle, neither wet nor dry. Election of Republican candidates is certain to result only in further dodging and sparring in an effort to defeat the people's will.

These Democratic candidates are all men of reputation and ability. They can be counted upon to serve their communities and their country honestly and well.

Recalling again the words of Alfred E. Smith recently during his now historic "home coming" to Boston, the way to get action for repeal is to elect men who stand on an outright pledge to vote for repeal. It will do no good to adopt resolutions and scream to high heaven after election.

Remember these names, if you want repeal. Vote for the Democratic congressional candidate in your district. Then you will be sure of getting action. And that is the only way you can be sure.

Styles in Underwear

Four years of an administration that was to put a chicken in every pot and two cars in every garage have had some interesting surprises.

One of them, among many others, is admitted by the Children's Bureau in Washington, which happens to be a branch of the Administration itself.

The Children's Bureau reveals that because of low wages paid in eastern, southern and middle western States the children of a good many laborers are wearing underclothing and nightdresses made of flour and sugar sacks.

Perhaps Administration spokesmen will point with pride to this, on the grounds that if their party had not been in power the children might have no underwear or nightdresses at all.

But perhaps, on second thought, they will not—for right here in Boston there are boys and girls to whom a flour sack or a sugar sack would be a godsend.

Legalized Brew

One question that the Revenue Bureau is mulling over is how strong beer should be, if and when it becomes sanctioned by law.

David Burney, head of the bureau, thinks it should contain at least four per cent of alcohol by weight. The brewers, after a long conference, think beer would be unpalatable if it contained less.

Ale, they figure, ought to be at least one notch higher. The good old English breakfast ale, the kind drunk at 4 a. m. by John Wesley, who abhorred tea and coffee, was around six per cent.

Perhaps a sort of plebiscite should be held to determine the potency of beer. Four per cent is evidently the danger point. Below that it may fall into disrepute as legalized slops. And, at this point, there is peril of competition with speakeasies, most of which disdain to serve brew of less than five per cent.

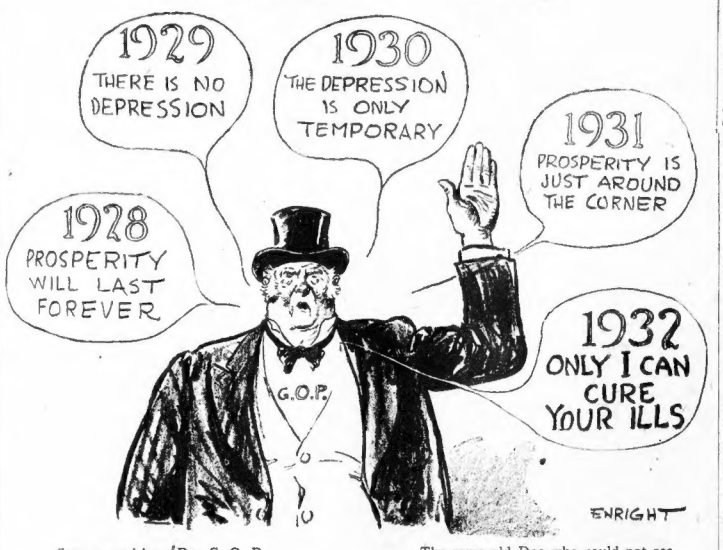
From Fun to Formulae

To millions of citizens the most important news of the week is that a new code of rules for bridge has been issued.

It should all help publishers of game books. But it increases the addlement of the ordinary mind. Bridge has been refined to the point where it now flirts dexterously with the higher algebra and calculus. Small wonder that Lasker, the renowned chess adept, gave up his game for the deeper mysteries of contract.

Still, there are signs of rebellion. Pinochle is on the increase, poker has become quite respectable, and the augury is that tiddle-de-winks may be in vogue.

Old Doc G. O. P. Talking



Step up and hear Doc G. O. P.,
The wizard wise and great.
Who sells a magic remedy
To cure you while you wait.
He drives away your woes and fears
And makes you fat and slick—
The same old Doc who took three years
To learn that you were sick.

The same old Doc who could not see
The blight upon the land,
The breadlines and the misery
That stalked on every hand;
The same old Doc will guarantee
A cure for all your ills.
"Step up," says he. "One vote for me
Will buy the magic pills."

A Cabinet of Deficiencies

By Claude G. Bowers

WE ARE NOW in the last week of the campaign with every indication of an overwhelming Roosevelt landslide. Nothing in conditions has changed since the opening gun was fired. There are still 11,000,000 people on the streets; there are still 40,000,000 people in distress, and as soon as the polls have closed we must all do what we can to prevent the starvation of women and children in this third Hoover Winter of Human Misery.

Business still is prostrate. Agriculture is sinking deeper into the slough of ruin. Our foreign markets still are lost, and the ineptitude of the Administration has been more than ever manifest on the stump.

The trend toward Roosevelt has gained constantly in momentum, and the desperate attempts of demagogues to intimidate the weak-minded among business men and to blackjack the workers have failed utterly. It is inconceivable that anything can or will occur in the interval before the election to change the situation one iota.

* * *

All This Has Failed

Mr. Hoover at the beginning, surrounded by sycophants, as men in power always are, and by the meaningless applause of the Knights of the Rapidan, assumed that he could remain comfortable in the fishing camp and merely wait with folded hands for the people to vote for "four years more of Hoover." He has been shaken out of his lethargy by the reports his own people have brought him.

He and his crowd have imagined that they could turn the tide by methods antiquated and discredited. Big business men—some of them largely responsible for the mess in which we find ourselves—would give out pompous statements about the return of prosperity. Some big industrialists, like Henry Ford, would blackjack their employes into voting as they said, as though they were Chinese coolies. The Democrats, whose Federal Reserve System has saved all that has been saved of the financial structure of the nation, would be described as "radicals." And Mr. Hoover and his Cabinet would take liberties with the record in setting forth things with which the people are too familiar to be deceived.

All this has failed.

The campaign has done one thing effectively—it has rather shocked the people with a realization of the type of mentalities that have been in charge of our destinies. Somehow Mr. Hoover's Cabinet of All the Deficiencies has mercifully escaped the analysis of the public until these gentlemen took the stump.

Mr. Mills, with considerable arrogance and a domineering manner and a loud voice, has been the only one whose support on the stump has meant anything at all. He has juggled figures that Jack Garner has devastatingly exposed; but everyone with the knowledge that one of the principal reasons for the delay in the balancing of the budget was the inability of Mr. Mills to come within hundreds of millions of dollars of the deficit is more than a bit dubious about his figures any way.

From the beginning of the Government no Secretary of the Treasury has been so undependable in his estimates as Mr. Mills and his predecessor who is campaigning for Mr. Hoover in England—by mistake. These two gentlemen have the rare distinction of having been off in their estimates by almost a billion dollars.

Secretary Stimson has been utterly worthless on the stump. His part in the floating of foreign loans on which the investors hold the bag has been painfully apparent. He made one denial; but when Carter Glass and Robinson pulled the record on him he sank into a becoming silence. His mussy mixing with the Manchurian issue almost forced us into war.

Secretary Hurley—Hurley of the bayonets and tanks—has been a liability ever since he summoned the tanks and gas squad and the torches to attack penniless and unarmed veterans and to burn their miserable shacks.

His pompous purse-proud assertion that the "jobless must shift for themselves," has made him anathema in every industrial section.

Secretary Lamont has been a liability ever since he told the convention of welfare workers in Philadelphia that the suffering and privation of the children of the jobless would be "good for their character."

Secretary Hyde, spewing personalities mostly, ought, because of his position, to be of service on the stump in agricultural sections.

It was Hyde who solemnly explained that the ruin of agriculture is due to the fact that the dietitians have persuaded our women to eat less for their figures' sake; and, apparently, his plan is to save agriculture by fattening the women.

He it was, also, who suggested that the man denied the right to work should take advantage of his "leisure" to see the country and to fish and hunt.

Secretary of Labor Doak, forced on him over its vehement protest, cannot be sent into labor communities because of his notorious sympathy with labor's exploiters.

Attorney-General Mitchell lost his value in this campaign when he said he would have no District Attorney who did not personally believe in the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act.

* * *

A Cabinet of the Minnows

On the whole, it has been a Cabinet of the Minnows.

It was Mr. Root who made the comment to Nicholas Murray Butler that while there had been a time when the outstanding political brains of the country were among the Republicans, they were now found among the Democrats.

The John W. Davises, the Newton D. Bakers, the Alfred E. Smiths, the Albert B. Ritchies, the Bernard Baruchs—these are the kind of men from among whom the next Cabinet will be framed; and even the most timid soul ought to be a bit better content with these than with the men who now advise the President in the most critical of times.

"White Way" Victims

NEW YORK, Nov. 3—Broadway, in its continued decadence, does not these days appeal to gilded youngsters coquetting with Bohemia. Pampered bloods prefer to break their speed records along the Riviera's Corniche Road, away from prying kinsfolk, and where the liquor is not only cheaper but less lethal.

The last speakeasy sacrifice was the shyly bewildered Smith Reynolds. At "No. 21" and other spots they still rehash how he sat on the edge of chairs in perpetual blink. He did not melt into the modern fluidity, but, mawkish as it sounds, the Broadway of lights and headache finally got him.

In the same way, Broadway "took" Danny Caswell, boyish Cleveland millionaire. He, too, was blinded by the glitter. A schoolboy romanticism catapulted him into a show girl marriage and an amble down the primrose path. At 25, a robust constitution buckled with delirium. And he died.

Young Draper Dougherty, son of an attorney general, looked upon Broadway from his velvet-shod cloister as a spot for an occasional hale evening. In the end he was caught in its frenzy, squeezed dry and tossed aside like a tossed peel from an orange-drink stand.

The White Way's last cycle untrussed many other frolicking fellows, including Jim Donahue and Kip Rhinelander. And the Broadway pace for Russell Ryder, Herbert and John Locke diminuendoed into a prison lock-step. All might have been happy today but for that nebulous area—known as Broadway.

Idiosyncrasies: Will Hayes wears small, button-sized lapel flowers . . . Gene Tunney's handwriting is strikingly feminine . . . Helen Morgan goes stockingless and sandaled to parties . . . With toe nails tinted a bright cherry red . . . Bruce Barton is always in the front row at a John Golden opening.

They were discussing Ring Lardner's glum humor. At Miami Beach one season a persistent hostess, in the same hotel with the humorist, kept his phone ringing entreating him to attend a cocktail soiree. He finally consented. After the crowd gathered he drifted into the room in owl-eyed aloofness, handed the hostess a card and squatted sullenly in far-away corner. On the card he had parodied:

I have come to your partie, smartie.

George D. Buckley invariably visits the paddock at races. At Belmont, some time ago, with Joe Moore, he watched exercise boys lead entries about. One especially sleek, trim-ankled and beautiful two-year-old caracoled before them.

"I'd like to put a bet on her," said Moore.

The mail is flooded with winter resort brochures. One stresses informality of a certain inn. "You are only expected to be social and wear a dinner coat one evening a week." it purrs. With my worries, I should try to sit up and look charming even one itty-bitty night a week!

Many of us want to hibernate this winter in the manner of the sore-footed bear. As soon as I can find a suitable cave I expect to button myself in and let go a whole season's pout. Indeed, if they don't do something about the world, I may not even come out for my annual spring dance.
